Da Nang is captured

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — Da Nang, South Vietnam's second largest city and its last bastion in the northern zone, has been captured by Communist-led troops, Saigon military officials said today.

One official said the government lost four infantry divisions, an air force division and other units for an estimated total of nearly 100,000 soldiers who were trapped in the area.

"The loss of the city was the single biggest defeat for South Vietnam in the past 20 years," he added.

The fall of Da Nang was reported only hours after President Ford in Washington had ordered U.S. Navy boats to Da Nang to help evacuate a half-million refugees who had fled to the port city, 380 miles north of Saigon.

The victory left North Vietnamese-Viet Cong forces in control of the entire northern quarter of South Vietnam.

Da Nang's population had doubled to more than a million in recent days as refugees swarmed into the zone, hoping to be evacuated to government-controlled areas farther south.

Da Nang, once a stronghold of the U.S. Marines, had collapsed into disorder and rioting as the end neared.

Refugees and government soldiers battled each other Saturday to board aircraft or barges leaving the city as the Communist-led troops closed in. Frantic soldiers shot and kicked civilians to seize an evacuation plane and terrified refugees fell off crowded barges and sampans in the harbor.

Saigon officials said a heavy artillery and rocket barrage forced Lt. Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, commander of the northern 1st Corps, to leave his headquarters with his staff. They said he boarded a navy vessel that left the port for the South China Sea. As Truong and his command staff abandoned the city North Vietnamese and Viet Cong advance units entered, sweeping over government positions, the officials said.

Also lost in the capitulation was millions of dollars worth of military equip-

Ford signs far-reaching tax cut bill

Urgent necessity outweighs its drawbacks, says President on TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford signed a $24.8-billion tax-cut bill into law Saturday night, saying the drawbacks of the legislation are outweighed "by the urgent necessity of an anti-recession tax reduction right now."

Approval of the bill assures that about 72 million Americans will begin receiving 1974 tax rebate checks — ranging up to $200 — beginning in early May. It also assures 1975 tax reductions, which will show up in lower withholding taxes as early as May.

Ford announced the signing of the bill in a nationwide radio and television address, and said he is drawing the line for a 1976 budget deficit at $60 billion.

"This is as far as we dare to go," Ford said. "I will resist every attempt by the Congress to add another dollar to this deficit by new spending programs."

He said the only exceptions he would tolerate to new spending programs would be spending for "our long-range national security interests ... or urgent humanitarian needs." The remark about humanitarian needs was added to Ford's prepared text and was seen as a possible reference to increased spending for war-torn Cambodia and South Vietnam.

In addition to its tax cut provisions, the bill, approved by Congress last week, repeals the controversial 22 per cent oil depletion allowance for major oil companies.

The bill contains the following tax reductions that will affect virtually all taxpayers:

—A 10 per cent rebate for 1974 taxes to a maximum of $200, although the rebate will gradually decline to $100 as incomes rise from $20,000 to $30,000.

—A $30 tax credit for each personal tax exemption for 1975, which will be reflected in lower withholding rates.

—A substantial increase in the standard minimum tax deduction for 1975, which also will appear in lower withholding rates.

Other provisions affecting lower-income persons include a $50 one-time bonus payment this year for Social Security recipients, and special payments of up to $400 for working families with low incomes.

It also will give buyers of new homes a tax credit equal to 5 per cent of the purchase price, to a maximum credit of $2,000. Sellers will not be able to increase sales prices over the lowest previous offered price.

About 5 million Americans will be removed from the tax rolls altogether because the income level below which taxes won't have to be paid will be raised to about $5,700 for a family of four.

Ford signed the tax bill midway during his 15-minute speech while seated at his desk in the Oval Office at the White House. Afterward, he rose and went to a red-lined chart showing the potential growth in budget deficits.

Pointing to the red line that showed a budget deficit of $60 billion in fiscal 1976, Ford said, "I am drawing the line right here." He turned and drew a line on the chart.

Ford said that although he is signing the tax bill, he believes it "fails to give adequate relief to the millions of middle-income taxpayers who already contribute the biggest share of federal taxes."

Initial reaction from members of Congress was favorable but few could be reached for comment because Congress recessed for Easter earlier in the week and most members returned to their home districts.

Sen. Russell B. Long, who as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee strongly influenced the final terms of the bill, said Ford "did the right thing" in approving it.

"By signing the bill, the President will set the stage for bipartisan cooperation to promote the nation's interest," he said.

Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, also welcomed the action, but said, "The President really didn't have much choice if he wanted to avoid making unemployment even worse."

Ford said he signed the tax cut legislation "despite the serious drawbacks in this bill." He said he hoped Congress will allow the most controversial provisions to expire after one year, although he didn't single out these provisions in his speech.

Ford previously objected to tying tax credit for housing and the oil depletion repeal to the tax cut bill.

The Internal Revenue Service has said it will take a maximum of 45 days to start getting the tax rebate checks for 1974 in the mail, and that all checks should be mailed within six weeks after that.

Under the new law, individuals will get refunds of up to 10 per cent, but no more than $200, on taxes paid for 1974. The money will be distributed within 45 to 60 days. In the same time period, everyone collecting Social Security benefits will get a one-shot extra payment of $50.

Lon Nol to quit Cambodia; No. 2 man already out

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — President Lon Nol has decided to leave Cambodia to better the chances for U.S. aid to his country, reliable sources close to the president said Saturday.

The reports came as Cheng Heng, the No. 2 man on the rebels' death list, flew with his family to Paris and insurgent forces dug in only seven miles from Phnom Penh after penetrating the northern defense perimeter and then being driven back slightly by government troops.

According to the sources, Lon Nol, the No. 1 man on the rebels' death list, and his whole family would depart Phnom Penh for the Indonesian capital of Jarkarta and proceed to the United States after a stay of several days. Lon Nol and his family have already obtained entry visas for the two countries, the sources said.

U.S. sources said Lon Nol was expected to depart perhaps as early as Tuesday and that he would also visit Japan. It was not clear whether Lon Nol's reported plans included a visit to Washington. One source said he understood Lon Nol might travel no farther than Hawaii, where he was treated in 1971 following a stroke.

Angry airways chief charges incompetence in airlift delay

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — Ed Daly, head of World Airways, charged Sunday that American and South Vietnamese agencies were incompetent and caused an eight-day delay in his rescue airlift out of Da Nang.

"Those people are gone," he said of the 400,000 to 600,000 refugees who couldn't get out of the northern port city before it fell to Communist-led troops. "Da Nang is gone."

"It's been that way for eight days," Daly said, "I can't tolerate the stupidity, the ignorance on the part of many agencies of the United States government and the country club set." He spoke in an interview after returning from the last flight, bloodied from scratches where refugees and soldiers had clawed and shoved at him.

"They are inexperienced and incompetent," he said of the U.S. and Vietnamese officials he had dealt with.

Daly ordered three of his red-and-white World Airways Boeing 727 cargo jets to Da Nang on Saturday, against the advice of American officials. The airlift began Wednesday night and was to have carried several thousand persons a day to safety but by its end Saturday, it had transported less than 1,200 people out of Da Nang.

Each day rioting to get on the planes grew worse until the final flight Saturday when about 400 frenzied South Vietnamese troops shot and trampled their way over women and children to board the plane. The jet was damaged when other soldiers unable to get on shot at it and tossed hand grenades.

The two other planes did not land after hearing of the chaos and firing on the ground.

"Can you imagine U.S. AID has the guts to say we won't be paid for the flight," said Daly, 52, a former soldier in the South Pacific who carried a .38 caliber pistol jammed into his belt on the flight. "I'll pay for it myself."

He would not say how much it would cost.

Daly said he ordered the flights to Da Nang because "nobody is going to tell me how to make a decision. Ours is a humanitarian effort. We wanted to be a catalyst to get both the American and the Vietnamese governments under way."

Woman's body lies in bathtub of water

The body of a 50-year-old Pomona woman was found at her home by police Saturday, lying in a bathtub filled with water.

Johnnie Maxine Hochwalt of 189½ E. Holt Ave. was pronounced dead at the scene by officers called to the home by her son, at 2 p.m.

The victim's body and clothing was badly burned, and police theorized she may have accidently set her clothing on fire and then got in the tub to douse the flames. A coroner's report is pending.

Winds, dust send motorists for shelter in Ontario area

High winds and blowing dust wreaked havoc with motorists in the Ontario area Saturday, as recreational vehicles were blown off the San Bernardino Freeway, signs were knocked down and trees felled.

Highway patrolmen reported about 50 vehicles—including campers, trailers and motorcycles—were forced to pull off the freeway near the Milliken Avenue offramp because visibility was reduced to zero to 20 feet.

Also, at least one fire in Ontario was partially blamed on the winds and a motorcyclist rear-ended an auto on the freeway during the dust storm.

Warnings were out for campers and trailers to stay off the freeway, as high winds blew from early morning until about 2 p.m.

One camper blew off its pickup truck and ended up on the south side of the freeway near the Ontario Motor Speedway, at Milliken. A trailer was disabled near Etiwanda Avenue, and numerous campers and trailers pulled off at truck stops and rest areas between OMS and Fontana. Highway crews watered down the area around the new Devore interchange to keep the dust down.

Ontario police reported a roof was knocked off a shed at OMS, and the roof fell on a water main causing water to spew onto the freeway, adding to the traffic problems.

A motorcyclist, William Keith Bland, 20, of Bloomington, crashed into a car driven by Earl Lawson, 39, of Lomita on the freeway at the Rochester Avenue offramp, at 9:10 a.m.

Bland suffered a broken wrist, and cuts on his left leg. He was taken to Ontario Community Hospital for treatment.

Lawson told patrolmen he was unable to see because of "blowing sand" and stopped on the freeway because the car in front of him had halted. All cars were traveling westbound. Ontario firemen blamed the winds for spreading of a fire from a detached garage to a carport at 2902 E. G St. The blaze caused $5,000 damage, destroying both the garage and carport and causing minor damage to the roof of the home.

ONTARIO APARTMENT FIRE

Fire officials Saturday credited the use of their snorkel preventing a $50,000 apartment house fire at 1044 Sacramento Ave. from spreadng to nearby apartment units. Fire units responded to a call at 12:26 p.m. to a blaze which had enveloped the entire roof and attic of a building containing four two-story apartments. The fire was knocked down in 10 minutes, but firemen needed several hours to put out the fire in the attic. Suspected cause is sparks from a fireplace.

President Ford signs tax cut bill...

For 1975, each taxpayer can deduct $30 from his tax bill for every member of his family. In addition, minimum and maximum standard deductions are increased for those who do not itemize such deductions.

It raises the maximum standard deduction to 16 per cent of gross income, with a maximum of $2,300 for singles and $2,600 for couples. It also provides a $30 across-the-board tax credit for every taxpayer and each personal exemhtion claimed in the family.

Businesses will benefit in 1975 and 1976 from an increase in the investment tax credit — to 10 per cent of what they spend on new facilities and equipment instead of the present 7 per cent.

Those who buy a new home between March 13 and Dec. 31 will be able to subtract 5 per cent of the cost of the house, up to a top of $2,000, from this tax bill this year.

The $24.8 billion of tax cuts and other benefits in the new law are partly offset by $2 billion of additions to treasury revenues through tax changes affecting major oil producers and multi-national corporations.

The biggest revenue-raising item, and one of the law's most controversial provisions, would end the 22 per cent depletion allowance for big oil companies.

In his address, Ford said any damage that might be done by the provisions he opposes "is outweighed by the urgent necessity of an anti-recession tax reduction right now." He added:

"Even if I asked Congress to send me a better bill, and they did, it would take too long to get one back and I cannot in good conscience risk more delay."

In explaining his decision, that followed several days of personal sifting through conflicting advice from key aides, Ford said:

"In short, in signing this bill I am keeping my promise to reach a reasonable compromise with the Congress and to provide a needed boost to the economy. I must say again this is as far as I will go."

Ford said that "if we use common sense and prudence, I am confident that the present recession will retreat into history."

Ford complained that Congress so far as "rejected or ignored most of my requested spending cuts." If reductions are not made and legislation to increase spending is enacted, he said, "this would bring the deficit to the enormous total of $100 billion."

"Deficits of this magnitude are too dangerous to permit," he continued. "They threaten another vicious spiral of runaway double-digit inflation which could well choke off any economic recovery."

The President said "the most troublesome defect" of the new law is the additionof "a lot of extraneous changes in our tax laws, some well-intentioned but very ill-considered."

Instead of being carefully considered with full hearings and full debate, he said, "they were adopted in a hectic last-minute seasion before recessing."

White House Press Secretary Ronald Nessen had said earlier that Ford had received conflicting advice on the bill from his advisers before deciding whether to sign it.

Off for California

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Ford departed by presidential jet for California on Saturday an hour after Ford signed the tax cut bill on nationwide television.

ment including warplanes, tanks and artillery.

Among the divisions trapped and with litle hope of escaping were the 1st and 2nd infantry divisions, a marine division, rangers and armored cavalry and militia units. The rangers, marines and infantrymen were considered to be among South Vietnam's best fighters and were stationed in the northern tier of the country to oppose North Vietnamese infiltration across the demilitarized zone.

Ford, seeking to relieve Da Nang's critical refugee problem, had ordered U.S. Navy transports to stand off Da Nang and other threatened South Vietnamese ports to transfer refugees to "a safe haven farther south."

He also appealed to "all nations and corporations that have ships in the vicinity of the South Vietnamese coast to help" in the evacuation that came too late for Da Nang.

Last flight from Da Nang . . . horrifying

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — "An old woman was pulled out of my arms and I saw her trampled five times," said air hostess Jan Wollett. "After that, there was nothing left of her."

It was the last flight out of Da Nang on Saturday, and everyone wanted to get aboard.

About 400 frenzied South Vietnamese troops shot and trampled their way over women and children to board the World Airways Boeing 727 cargo plane — the only remnant of a massive airlift promised by American officials to carry 10,000 people a day to safety.

Total chaos reigned as South Vietnam's second largest city tottered on the brink of falling into Communist hands. North Vietnamese rockets dropped on the airport, once a major U.S. base for bombing the north. The control tower was abandoned.

Between 400,000 and 600,000 refugees still desperately sought a way out. The thousands waiting at the airport since Wednesday night were unlikely to escape before the expected arrival of the communist forces.

"Those people are gone. Da Nang is gone," said World Airways president Ed Daly, who was clawed bloody and his clothes torn as he smashed soldiers with his pistol butt to clear them off the plane to permit it to take off.

A sealift also was under way, with 10,000 refugees reaching Cam Ranh Bay on Saturday. But U.S. officials said as many as 400,000 were trying to get out of Da Nang by sea.

The refugees from cities and villages that have already fallen to the Communist-led forces doubled the population of Da Nang, while authority collapsed.

Miss Wollett, who is from Los Angeles, and two other air hostesses were charged with pulling aboard the refugees on the Da Nang flight, which became the target of fragmentary grenades and of automatic rifle fire unleashed by angry troops unable to board it. The crew said 1,000 tried to get aboard.

"We were screaming, 'Where are the women and children? Where are the women and children?'" she said.

In the swirling melee on the sunbaked runway, Joe Hrezo, the World Airways manager at Clark Air Base in the Phillippines, got off to try to organize things and said he saw a Vietnamese Air Force man shoot down what looked to be a whole family.

Another soldier shot out the tires of a minitruck people were riding to reach the aircraft. Hrezo said he saw a motorcyle crash into a packed Jeep, "and it must have killed 10 people."

At least six rockets hit the airport while the plane was on the ground at Da Nang, according to Hrezo, from Uniontown, Pa.

CRUSHED IN WHEEL WELL

With the body of a soldier swinging from the undercarriage, a gaping hole in one wing and its rear door flapping open, the 727 made it safely to Saigon airport after a heartstopping two-hour flight that ordinarily would have taken 40 minutes to cover the 375 miles.

"We flew at 10,000 feet all the way to try to save the people in the cargo belly and clinging to the wheel wells."

The plane carried 293 persons in the cabin, fitted to seat 125. About 100 were in the cargo hold or clinging to the wheel wells. The plane flew to Saigon with its landing gear down, Daly said.

However, the nose wheel was damaged. Miss Wollett said the crew was at emergency stations in anticipation of a crash landing at Saigon.

"In the plane, the soldiers asked when the next planes would come to Da Nang to pick up their wives and children," she addkd.

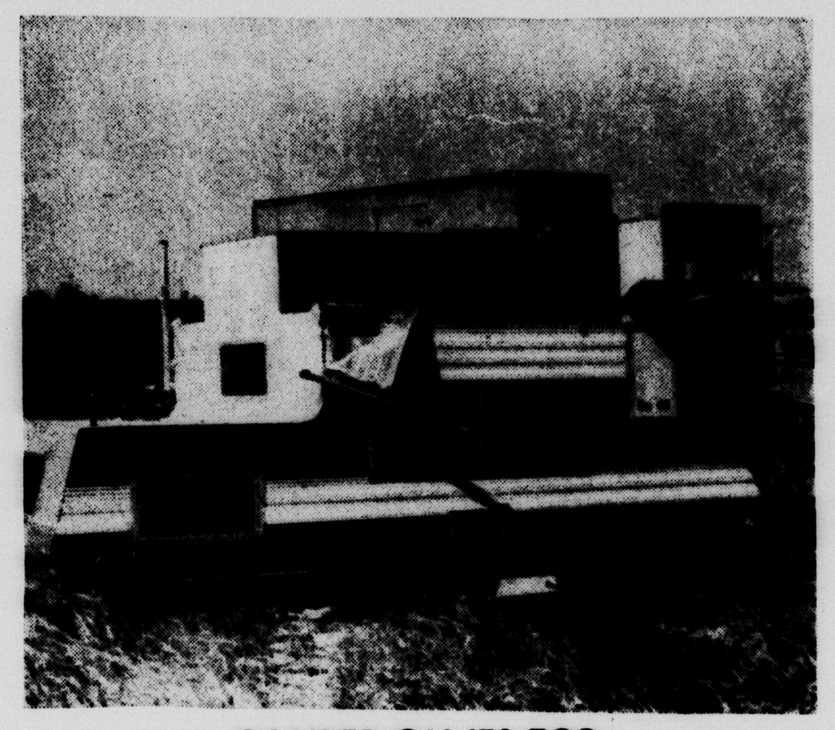
At Saigon, other armed Vietnamese troops ringed the aircraft with weapons ready, and the refugee soldiers were rounded up immediately.

Unofficial sources said they were taken into custody.

The body of the dead soldier was pulled from a wheel well in Saigon, and a security officer said he had apparently been crushed.

A few others who hung partly out of the plane during the flight survived.

Daly said after landing in Saigon that he had sent the plane to Da Nang as part of a plan for three planes to fly there at half-hour intervals because "we wanted to act as a catalyst to get both the American and the Vietnamese government under way."



CAMPER ON ITS TOP

High winds and blowing dust caused this camper to blow off the San Bernardino Freeway after it came off a pickup truck. Accident occurred Saturday near Milliken Avenue offramp in Ontario. Wind conditions were hazardous along freeway.

Hells Angels on way to gang war; alert on

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Officers across the country have been asked to watch for Hells Angels motorcycle gang members believed to be heading to North Carolina for a gang war, authorities said Saturday.

In a nationwide teletype message, the California Highway Patrol asked law enforcement agencies for any information on movement of Hells Angels members leaving California or other states.

Authorities estimate about 500 Angels are going to take part in a fiddlers' convention in North Carolina, the highway patrol said.

Ken Hunter, a highway patrol officer, quoted the teletype message as stating: "The main purpose is a gang war with an outlaw group from Chicago or the Midwest."

The teletype did not state where the fiddlers' convention would be in North Carolina, Hunter said. He said the message was sent by the highway patrol's intelligence unit Thursday.

He added he did not know where authorities got their information about the California-based motorcycle group's plans.

$1,500 charter jet flight for invalid dog

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. (AP) — Virginia Wenger has paid $1,500 to have her German Shepherd flown by charter jet to Oklahoma for specialized heart treatment.

Miss Wenger, a nurse for 33 years, hired a Lear jet Friday to fly 9-year-old Cindy to Oklahoma State University at Stillwater. A team of doctors may operate Monday or Tuesday.

"Even if we can't save her, it will help people," Miss Wenger said Saturday. "Even if I lose her, they're going to learn something to help people in the future."

The charter plane was needed because there are no direct commercial flights to Stillwater, she said, and doctors feared Cindy might die if she didn't reach them immediately. Miss Wenger made the 90-minute flight with Cindy and returned on the jet.

A veterinarian here has diagnosed the ailment as a hole between the two large chambers in the heart.

"The doctors say she has a 1 to 2 per cent chance to live," Miss Wenger said. "But that's better than nothing."

Any surgery will be done free in the name of research, she said. If Cindy pulls through, Miss Wenger said she will either drive or fly back to Oklahoma to get her.

Quarter of town's residents homeless after tornado hits

WARREN, Ark. (AP) — One out of every four residents of Warren was left homeless by a tornado that swept through the town, killing seven persons and injuring 85 others. Damage was estimated at more than $10 million.

Gov. David Pryor toured the city Saturday afternoon and said about 1,500 of the city's slightly more than 6,000 residents were left without shelter after Friday night's tornado.

The homeless spent Saturday in schools, churches and the YMCA building, which were relatively undamaged in the twister, the third in 30 years to strike here.

Pryor, who made the damage estimate, said later he had sent President Ford a telegram asking that Bradley County, which includes Warren, be declared a disaster area.

J. Shields McClain, an elderly blind man, huddled with his family inside his battered wood-frame house Friday night as the tornado swept over the town.

Oil price linked to Israel policy

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Crown Prince Fahd linked the future course of Saudi Arabia's oil pricing policy Saturday with American support for Israel.

He also said, in connection with the assassination Tuesday of King Faisal, "The American nation and other friendly nations who shared our sorrow .. should rest assured that there was nothing behind this crime except a mad man. If we look back into history, we can find many similar tragedies."

Easter in the Holy Land . . . . . Passover in Russia

By The Associated Press

Black-robed monks and choirboys clad in crimson held a solemn procession through the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem on Saturday, observing the day Christians believe Jesus lay in his tomb before rising from the dead.

Holy Saturday passed peacefully although Jerusalem was under heavy armed guard following two bombings in the city on Good Friday, one of which wounded 13 Israelis.

In Rome, Pope Paul VI called Friday for the remembrance of those still suffering because of war and "political or civil conflicts."

In Spain, police reinforcements spread out over the northern Basque provinces to block antigovernment demonstrations scheduled for Easter Sunday after separatist guerrillas gunned down a secret policeman.

In Jerusalem, a soldier with a submachine gun stood at the door to the church over Jesus' traditional burial place, and other troops mingled with the crowds of pilgrims and Jews observing Passover who crammed the narrow alleys and markets of the old walled city.

Easter week climaxes at midnight Saturday with a high mass in the church, followed by bells pealing out the message of Jesus' resurrection.

The church services were an explosion of color, pomp, hymns and organ music as the procession, led by the vicar of Nazareth, filed through the towering chapel.

Latin litanies chanted by 100 monks and choirboys echoed through the cavernous church. The air was thick with incense, and the only light came from candles held by the worshipers, and an occasional sunbeam lancing through the church's high windows.

Hundreds of foreign pilgrims attended the ceremony in the crusader-built church. At times their singing clashed with the exuberant chanting of a group of Coptic — Egyptian — Christians holding separate rites in the grotto where Jesus lay.

MOSCOW (AP) — Police with bullhorns entered the main Moscow synagogue Saturday, ordered everyone out before the Passover service had ended and then swept the street outside of people, Jews on the scene reported.

It was a near repeat of police action Wednesday on the first evening of Passover, but Jews at the scene said this was the first time they could remember police actually entering the synagogue.

The witnesses said that after about 10 uniformed policemen cleared the synagogue and shut its doors, about 25 of them formed up from sidewalk to sidewalk in a phalanx and cleared all people off the street.

There were no clashes reported and no arrests. Police continued to break up groups of people forming on the sidewalks, yelling at them through the bullhorns to keep moving.

The witnesses said that when Western correspondents arrived shortly after the police action, the street commotion had subsided and police were using more restraint.

Brother Jim: a pistol packin' preacher

MILLIKEN, Colo. (AP) — When somebody calls a cop in Milliken, the call is answered by a pistol-packing preacher.

He's James Marostica, 31, "Brother Jim" to the 65 members of the Assembly of God Church.

Marostica formerly was a dairy farmer in nearby Johnstown. Last year he sold his farm, moved to this eastern Colorado town of 1,000 and set up shop as Milliken's first and only police officer.

"I wasn't looking for a job as a policeman, but the job came open," Marostica said.

Then, last December, when Earl Fread retired as pastor of the church, Marostica entered the pulpit as a preacher, paid from the collection plate each Sunday.

Marostica said there's little crime in Milliken, "mainly because we don't have any bars," and his job as a cop, for which he says he's paid $715 a month, primarily involves mediating family squabbles.

"Being a pastor helps in those situations, where nobody has committed a crime," Marostica said. "I just quiet the folks down and tell them where to go for help.

"Most would think it's a strange combination, but it's one that works together well."

Marostica said word has got around Milliken that the policeman is a preacher, but most people consider him a law officer rather than a man of the cloth when he answers a call.

He said he's never been required to decide between his beliefs as a Christian and his duty to maintain order, but he claimed that he could kill a man if he had to.

Psychiatrist says man merely faking amnesia

SAN DIEGO (AP) — One of seven men charged with defrauding three banks is faking amnesia, a psychiatrist says.

Dr. Edward Kernan testified Thursday against Lloyd William Schley, of Cleveland, in a trial to determine whether Schley is mentally competent to face the bank fraud charges.

Schley, also know as Lloyd Sahley, contends that he lost part of his memory in a fall last December in a county jail shower.

But Kernan said he tested Schley and concluded that his amnesia was an act.

"He did attempt to look bad on the tests but he looked so bad that it became apparent that he had overdone it," Kernan said.

Schley is charged with six others with making over $350,000 in fraudulent loan applications from Wells Fargo Bank, United California Bank and the Bank of California.

Illegal aliens' wages could top $1 billion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Illegal aliens may make more than $1 billion a year in wages and pay $170 million in taxes in Los Angeles County, a new study estimates.

The study, prepared for county supervisors by the county chief administrative officer's department, termed both the wage and tax estimates "highly speculative," however.

The report, submitted Tuesday, says it relied on news media estimates of the number of illegal aliens — a figure ranging from 54,000 to more than half a million in Los Angeles County.

The typical alien worker was described as unmarried, earning $2 an hour in a 40 hour week and living close to downtown.

The report arose after discussion by county fathers of whether the county was spending money imoronerly for illegal aliens and should sue the federal government under the theory that federal agencies should pay or step up deportation activities.

Civil War vets who fought Franco may get pensions

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A resolution urging the government to grant pensions to thousands of disabled veterans who fought against Gen. Francisco Franco in the Spanish civil war was unanimously passed Thursday by the interior policy commission of the Cortes, the Spanish parliament.

Luis Peralta Espana, the sponsor of the resolution, said the request was not for charity, "but to accomplish a just and profoundly human task."

If approved by the government, the amount of the pension would vary according to the degree of disability.

For many disabled veterans of the losing Republican army the measure would come too late. Time has depleted their ranks from an estimated 60,000 to less than 10,000 since the civil war ended in 1939.

Crippled veterans who fought on the side of Franco have been granted substantial pensions and other privileges.

But many disabled veterans of the Republican side have lived a miserable life begging on the streets or living from public charity.

Francisco Martinez Duran, a bedridden Madrid veteran who lost a leg in Guadalajara in 1938, once described his disabled comrades as nonpersons.

"For almost 35 years we have not existed," he said.

Fear blocks attempt to find slayer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tenants fearful of opening their doors are hampering the police search for the killer of an elderly man found stabbed and bludgeoned in his low-income project apartment.

The apartment of the victim, Stephen Singer, 74, was ransacked and his valise found in the 13th floor hallway of the high-rise city housing project in Queens, police said.

Several neighbors told police they saw a young man clad in dungarees and carrying a blue suitcase on the 13th floor at the time of the murder early Wednesday.

However, police said that as news of the murder spread, other tenants were afraid to open their doors, even to police seeking information about the killer.

Air quality expert says cars not top polluters

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Contrary to years of popular thought, cars are not the major source of air pollution in the San Diego area, an air quality expert says.

New data shows that automobiles account for only 35 to 40 per cent of the region's smog instead of 85 to 95 per cent as was feared, according to Lawrence Taylor of the San Diego Regional Air Quality Task Force.

"The automobile is still a big contributor, but it's not the culprit we thought it was," Taylor said.

The same study also showed that short trips in cars do as much harm to the air as long drives, he said.

Nevertheless, some of the heavy attention now focused on moving vehicles may have to be turned to such stationary polluters as factories, Taylor predicted.

Saving energy

NEW YORK (UPI) — Check the seals around your refrigerator and oven doors. If they aren't tight, adjust the latches or replace the seals to prevent loss of chilled or heated air.

For a clothes dryer, separate drying loads into heavy and lightweight batches. The lighter items take less drying time.

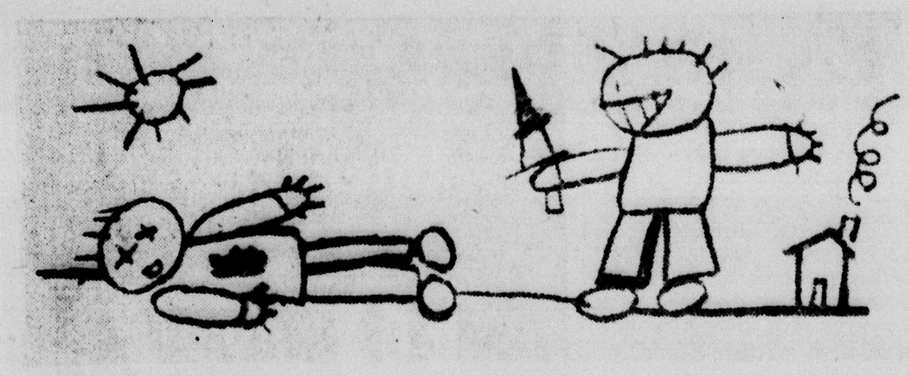
Childhood violence

Alarming increase in youth homicides noted in survey



By Salvatore Didato, Ph.D.
Consulting Psychologist

NEW YORK — (NEA) — A 15-year-old boy from Mountainside, N.J., killed both his parents with an axe and then jumped from a 150-foot tower to his death.

A college student who refused to surrender his wallet was knifed to death on a subway by three youths in their mid-teens — one white, one black, one Hispanic.

A boy on his way to a football game was stabbed to death by another youth who tribed to rob him of a few cents.

Probably nothing could be more shocking to our sensibilities than homicides in which young children are the victims. Nothing, with one exception, and that is that the murderers are themselves children.

Crimes of child violence are on the increase, especially in large cities.

Of the million children who are tried for offenses each year, some 30,000 to 50,000 are admitted to detention centers in various parts of the country. In any 12-month period, according to the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, these centers incarcerate approximately 150,000 youths between ages 7 and 17.

Parents who are stunned by child crime stories and overwhelmed by statistics might be more effective in dealing with their children if more facts are brought to light on the subject.

Today about one-half of our jailed criminals are juveniles. Although the ratio of boys to girls for many years was a steady 5 to 1, the gap is narrowing as sex role differences between them decrease.

Children who murder seldom do so with premeditation. Most often their crimes are "impulse crimes" and are motivated by deep personal disturbance brought on by broken home situations. If, in addition to a broken home, a child's family is on welfare, the likelihood of his getting into trouble is further increased and thereis usually a climate within the home of defiance toward the law.

The popular notion 'spare the rod and spoil the child' is contrary to what actually occurs. Children who are beaten frequently commit more crimes than those who are not. Also, many youngsters tend to act out after a crisi in the home involving the parents, e.g., a divorce, a separation, a violent domestic fight or a death. These have a poor self-image with parents who are frequently losers themselves, with set-backs in business, family or social life.

A time-worn fact is that most children who are apprehended for crimes have a disturbed relationship with their parents. Reports of neighbors and schoolmates of the boy from Mountainside indicated that there was strong family friction. He was under steady pressure to excel at school and to keep up with his older sister who was in college.

Although perceptive parents are a powerful deterrent to future criminal personalities,

Danger signs

Here is a check list of the most important behavioral factors indicating potential violence in a child:

Poor school adjustment — This includes poor attendance, meager class participation, distractability, provocative behavior.

Poor social adjustment — Few friends, acquaintances outside of one's peer group (children much older or younger of the opposite sex), unpopularity, sexual promiscuity.

Temper Tantrums — Outbursts which are out of proportion to the stimulus, frequent crying, pouting or screaming.

Fighting — Aggressive behavior without justification, bullying, scapegoating weaker children.

Bad Home Conditions — Over-crowded home, frequent parental fighting, cruel or inhumane treatment of children.

Destructiveness — Wanton destruction of one's own personal possessions or those of others, smashing or breaking things, vandalism.

Kidnaping now ranks as an Italian growth industry

By WILBORN HAMPTON

ROME (UPI) — Kidnaping has become one of Italy's major growth industries.

Over the past 18 months kidnaping has accelerated at a frightening pace, forcing police to set up a special "antikidnaping center."

From 1960 until 1972 official figures record a total of 91 kidnapings. All but four were in Sardinia, Sicily and the deep south towns of Reggio Calabria and Catanzaro—traditional centers of activty for the Mafia and others engaged in kidnaping.

The motives varied from ransom to vendetta and all but nine victims were released, escaped or were rescued by police. Known ransoms ranged from two million lire (about $3,000) to 500 million lire ($800,000) in Palemro in 1971 for Giuseppe Vassallo, the son of a reputed Mafia chieftain.

Then in July, 1973, Italy's kidnapers raised the stakes. J. Paul Getty III, grandson of the oil billionaire, was kidnaped in front of the French embassy in Rome.

The gang first demanded 10 billion lire (about $16 million). In five months of negotiation, during which the gang cut off young Getty's ear to show they meant business, the price dropped to about two billion lire ($3 million) and he was released.

As with everything else in Italy, the prices for ransom have since gone up. There were 38 kidnapings in 1974, according to police figures, and there have been another dozen so far this year.

The latest victim to be released was a Milan industrialist named Giuseppe Agrati. His family admitted paying a ransom that ran into "millions of dollars."

Police have advanced several possible reasons for the upswing in kidnapings. They range from criminal gangs trying to raise capital to finance a drug smuggling ring to political activists working to stir up fears that law and order are breaking down.

Left-wing newspapers have even suggested the government is behind some of the kidnapings as one means of collecting money from wealthy tax dodgers.

But for the victims and their families the rash of kidnapings holds little humor. Criminal sidelines have sprung up playing on the fears of those vulnerable to kidnap as well as families of kidnap victims.

In one case, a young man called a restaurant owner whose seven-year-old son was kidnaped in 1973 and tried to extort money from him by threatening to kidnap the boy a second time.

Enrico Panattoni alerted police, who arrested the would-be extortionist when he went to pick up the money. Panattoni in 1973 had paid 300 million lire (then $480,000) for the release of his little son, Mirko.

The current crime wave also has given birth to a new branch of insurance, the anti-kidnaping policy.

Although such policies are technically illegal in Italy, insurance brokers quietly admit they give them, especially for major clients.

"An industrialist for whom we already insure his plant, machinery, personnel, parking lot, his and his wife's legs when they go skiing, asks to be insured also against the risk of kidnap," one broker explained."What should we do? We run the risk of losing all the other policies if we say no."

J. PAUL GETTY III

Police have had a certain measure of success in combatting kidnaping. Of the 38 kidnapings on record last year, 20 were solved with arrests. Italian courts, never known for the swiftness of their justice, have given top priority to kidnap cases and have handed down stiff sentences in an effort to discourage the crime.

In two recent trials, courts sentenced one gang of nine kidnapers to a total of 124 years in jail and another group of six kidnapers to 77 years in prison.

While some gangs are responsible for multiple kidnapings, the new "anti-kidnaping squad" believes several gangs are in the kidnap business.

"I think we can exclude the possibility that all of these kidnapings are born of one organization," a spokesman for the police squad said. "The 'modus operandi' is too varied. Certainly, however, there are groups which have carried out two or three different kidnapings.

"There are four basic origins (for the kidnapings) to be considered—those by political groups, those by the mafia, those by extemporaneous gangs who improvise and those by traditional criminals, including smugglers, who need money and adjust to modern times.

"Let's not, however, delude ourselves that a few arrests can extirpate us from this wave of kidnapings. But we are making every effort to contain it."

Violence

they need reliable predictors of sadistic behavior in their children to alert them.

For decades, three valid behavioral indicators of later violence in children were: bedwetting, fire-setting and cruelty to animals. In the 1950s Sheldon and Eleanor Glueck, Harvard sociologists, whose study of 500 delinquents is probably the best work ever done on the subject, added several more. This year more research refined the list.

When 779 social workers, psychologists and psychiatrists were asked what they thought were the most significant signs in children related to future violence, the four most frequently cited behaviors were: school and social adjustment problems, temper tantrums and fighting.

When judiciously used by experts the indicators have been successful in predicting delinquency in children as young as eight.

You might recall a particular youngster who shows similar danger signals. But don't be misled, nearly all children exhibit these behavior patterns at one time or another. When four or five of them appear with frequency, the possibility of un-coming violent actions is great and professional help should be sought. The three thugs who murdered the college student showed many of the expected patterns: truancy, poor school adjustment, fighting, several arrests, an absent father, bad home conditions and poor parental controls.

Also there is abundant evidence that the media is a major cause, particularly television, of spawning anti-social actions. (Children spend as much time watching TV as they do in school.) Youngsters pick up crime tips through a process known as psychological modeling in which they imitate TV thugs who all to often support the notion that conflicts are best resolved by aggression or that violence is a superior way of problem solving.

In an era when juvenile crime is growing at a rate seven times that of the general population, or technique of coping with the problem seems doomed if we continue to treat or correct it after the fact, that is, through rehabilitation or imprisonment. With return to criminal acts after arrest and conviction of children up to as high as 80 per cent, a shift in focus to more creative approaches is clearly needed. Without exception, youth leaders are in a bedrock agreement that the antidote to detention is attention and their approaches can be both imaginative and bold.

Children who murder will always make news. They also will painfully rekindle the gnawing question: How have we failed our youth —

Is coal the answer to the U.S. energy crunch?

Energy

By DR. ROBERT STEFANKO

Energy dilemmas facing the country result from a lack of national leadership and public understanding of the real situation.

Tough decisions need to be made, but the political sector promotes popular but ineffective, inflationary programs rather than positive policies that would encourage the investment of private capital to build the energy capacity this country so desperately needs.

But the public, too, must assume a large share of the responsibility. Prodigious amounts of energy are expended that provide a questionable cost-benefit ratio — for instance, the use of dishwashers, washers and dryers, frostless refrigerators, instant-on TVs, gas — guzzling cars and an infinite variety of electrical gadgetry.

A major portion of the public still thinks our energy plight is a result of collusion among the large energy-producing companies to raise prices and inflate profits. The media do nothing to help correct this misconception when they quote large earnings increases for these companies. While a 500-per cent profit increase may appear exorbitant at first. But if this represents a rise in earnings from a depressed 10 cents to 50 cents a share, it hardly appears excessive.

The use of percentages and averages can be misleading. It reminds one of the story of a man who drowned in a pool that averaged three feet in depth — he just had the misfortune to fall into the eight-foot-deep end!

While our domestic supplies of crude oil and natural gas are limited, our coal reserves, which represent nearly 25 per cent of the world's supply, are adequate for 500 years at our present rate of consumption. Although development of offshore oil and gas reserves could buy time until other resources become available, it is coal that must ultimately provide a long-term solution to our problem.

Admittedly, there are supplementary sources of energy that can be developed but these should be kept in proper perspective. Solar and geothermal energy may make some contributions to our energy needs, but both have such severe technical limitations that they cannot provide a significant percentage of our requirements in the near future.

One supplementary energy resource that should be developed is methane from coal seams. Methane is associated with all coal seams since it evolves in the coalification process. However, the quantity present varies considerably from seam to seam and at different locations in the same seam.

Methane has long been an unwelcome byproduct of coal mining, continually being released into the mine atmosphere as the coal is removed. As a result it has been necessary to develop sophisticated ventilation systems capable of circulating four to six tons of air throughout a mine for each ton of coal produced in order to dilute and sweep away dangerous accumulations of gas.

Every day, nearly 300 million cubic feet of gas — $300,000 worth at today's price — is vented to the atmosphere from active U.S. coal mines. And still, with the increasing depth of mining, most mine ventilation systems are being overloaded. The result is the need for frequent and costly suspensions of mining activity until the gas can be cleared.

Experts agree that the deeper and more gassy coal seams cannot be mined in the future unless some degasification technique is applied before mining is begun. The U.S. Bureau of Mines has demonstrated that it is possible to degasify virgin coal seams by drilling vertical holes into them from the surface. The gas obtained from such boreholes is of high purity with a heating value equivalent to natural gas and may be placed directly into commercial pipelines.

To find out if methane recovery from virgin coal seams is economically feasible, a research team in the department of Mineral Engineering at Pennsylvania State University is making arrangements to drill five vertical holes into Pennsylvania seams, test these wells and determine the amount and rate of flow of gas from them.

When gas was plentiful and cheap, the process was not financially worthwhile, but in today's market it appears that it may be. In addition to profits from the sale of the methane, benefits also will accrue to mining operations through greater safety and fewer production delays.

The use of vertical boreholes from the surface is not, by any means, the ultimate technique for recovering methane. Wider shafts are necessary for mining. If these shafts were to be sunk into coal seams several years ahead of mining and a radial pattern of horizontal holes drilled into coal seams from the bottoms of them, the result would be a still more effective degasification scheme. The economics of this multiple-shaft scheme appear to be even more favorable than the borehole method.

In any event, accelerated research and development is needed in the near future to assess the economic technological and social benefits of recovering methane from coal seams.

Tonapah

A hotel room for $4 a day

TONOPAH, Nev. (AP) — Where in this inflation-blown country can one find a clean, well-heated hotel room for $2.50?

With a casino downstairs?

The $2.50 room is an "insider" in the 100-room Mizpah Hotel in this once-booming mining town between Las Vegas and Reno. This means the window opens onto a hallway.

Ventilation comes from air wells. That is, in many places the floors stop about three feet short of joining the outside walls. Balustrades keep you from stepping off.

For $4, you get the same thing with a window opening on the outside. The view is mine tailings, abandoned headboards and all the waste seen around old mining towns.

In both cases there is crisp linen and a basin with hot and cold running water. But the bathroom is in the hall.

If it is a bath you want, a room comes with tub for $7, with other rates climbing to $15 for two double beds, tub and shower.

In the hotel's restaurant—24hour service—there is a breakfast of two pork chops with two eggs for $3.50, and a soul-staying miner's stew, $1.75.

"We make the stew in a 20-gallon vat. Sell about 15 gallons a day," says the owner, Les E. Short.

It doesn't seem like there would be 15 gallons of stomach capacity in little Tonopah. But Missouri-born Short, 69, says otherwise. He says more miners are moving back into the area, drawn by the higher prices precious metals are fetching, and he serves as many miners as tourists.

"You can't depend on one alone," he said in an interview.

Mining is Tonopah's reason for being. Silver was discovered in 1900, and the Mizpah was completed in 1907.

The hotel is said to have been the gathering place of powerful men. Bernard Baruch reportedly got his start there. Death Valley Scotty and Jack Dempsey were visitors.

It is still a meeting place. In the morning, hardhat construction foremen outline the day's work over coffee. In the evening, the working stiffs come in to hear the band—yes, live music.

Inside a 12-by 18-foot vault that serves as his office—the lobby was once a bank—Short tells of his earlier days.

"I knew Harolds Club in Reno in the days of 10-cent blackjack and nickel craps," he said. "I knew Bill Harrah when he had a narrow little operation next door to Harold's.

"I could tell you a lot of stories, but you wouldn't be able to print them."

Short said he worked at the Last Frontier in Las Vegas in 1943 and 1944.

"There were only two hotels on the Strip, and everyone was saying there were too many," he said.

"I'm the one who changed the Mayer Hotel in Elko into the original Stockman's, which burned down in 1957."

Short said he acquired the Mizpah in 1956. It had been used during World War II to house officers from a nearby airfield.

With nuclear weapons going off at the Nevada Test Site, about midway between Tonopah and Las Vegas, short advertised "atomic" slot machines: "The jackpot fallout is terrific."

The Mizpah has 36 slot machines, two blackjack tables, one craps layout and a keno game. As in many Nevada operations, it is these that pay— not the rooms or miner's stew.

Ironically, the Mizpah was named after the Biblical "watchtower" lesson: "May the Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from the other."

But above the bar hangs a big sign:

"Oh give me a big silver dollar "To throw on the bar with a bang

"A dollar all creased will do things in the East

"But we want our money to clang."

Five-city valley truancy crackdown

Truant school children in five valley communities are to be swept off streets by police in a program aimed at reducing truancy and cutting daytime crime.

The program is called Operation Increased Attendance. It was designed by school authorities, police departments and the Pomona Valley Juvenile Diversion Project.

Communities participating in the operation are Pomona, Claremont, La Verne, San Dimas and Walnut.

The operation already is functional in Walnut. Claremont has begun on a small scale, according to juvenile diversion project manager Larry Rubin, who said it would begin Tuesday in Pomona, San Dimas and La Verne.

Rubin said law enforcement officers in participating communities will be checking youngsters on the streets between hours of 8 and 11 a.m., pick up those youngsters found out of school and transport them to neutral locations.

At those neutral locations, the children are screened by juvenile diversion, school and community people and then transported back to their respective schools. Parents whose children are picked up are contacted.

Rubin said children picked up by police would not be arrested or handcuffed and police would make no background checks. "They will be treated as truants, not criminals," he stressed.

Juvenile diversion project offices at 800 N. Park Ave. will serve as the neutral location in Pomona. Ernesto Chavez will be the truancy coordinator. Rubin said three persons had been added to the juvenile diversion staff to do screening.

Operation Increased Attendance was suggested by Bill Ruch of the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office after a similar operation in the El Monte-Hacienda-La Puente-Covina area cut daytime crime by 40 per cent, Rubin said.

After truant children have been returned to school, "meaningful programs" to keep them in school will be developed and followed through by juvenile diversion staff workers, Rubin added.

EASTER DELIGHT A RACE FOR CANDY

Ready to start a mad dash after candy Easter eggs at Ganesha Park in Pomona Saturday, youngsters line up, top, and await the signal to start. At bottom, from left, Joe Arnold, 2, searches for an approving look from mother; a trio of 3-year-olds compare Easter baskets; and Sean Gray, 3, gets a pre-hunt pep talk from David Huey of the Pomona Parks and Recreation Department. Hunts were at six locations in the city, co-sponsored by parks and firemen.

S.B. County to undertake census

Residents in San Bernardino County can expect a knock on the door within the next two weeks from a census taker wanting a head count.

The census will officially start Tuesday and should take about two weeks to complete.

County officials requested the special census to establish current population figures so the cities and county can obtain their correct share of state and federal taxes allocated on a population basis.

Should the county's projected figures be correct, the county and cities may be entitled to an additional $1 million per year.

The census bureau counted 684,000 county residents during the 1970 census. This was later revised upward to 700,000 in 1972. Officials believe the population to be closer to 730,000.

Cost of the census will be $422,000. This will be shared by 14 cities, including, Chino, Ontario and Upland.

Some 1,300 census takers will be employed. They will ask for the size of each household, plus the sex, race and age of residents.

The census will include a special Spanish speaking population count which is being taken at the request of Spanish speaking communities.

Police-minority relations on council agenda

A status report concerning police-minority relations will be delivered by a Department of Justice spokesman to Pomona City Council Monday night.

Angel Alderete, mediator for the Department of Justice, will deliver the report. Alderete has been working in Pomona since January when minority residents complained of an inability to communicate with the police and asked the city to call in a third party to help ease the situation.

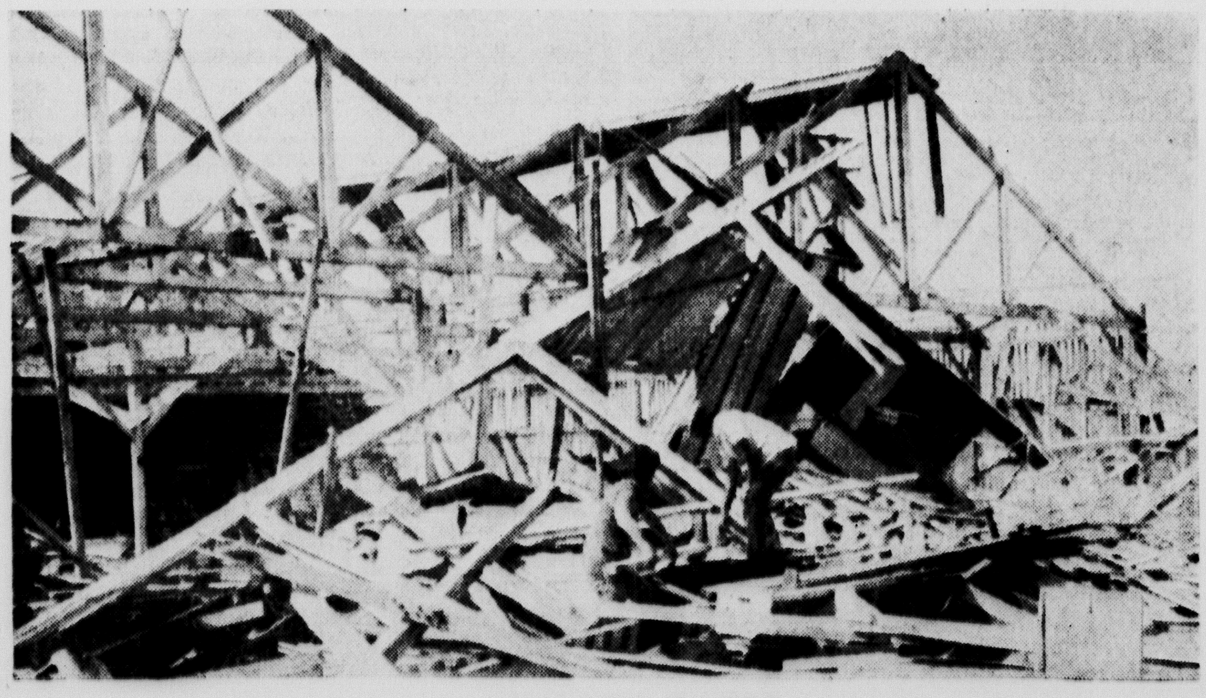
He is expected to explain what his actions have been up to now and what he recommends be done in the future.

Other agenda items for the 8 p.m. meeting include a report from the Pomona Development Co. about the proposed United California Bank building at Garey Avenue and Mission Boulevard.

A redevelopment project, the proposed building was originally envisioned as a six-story structure. For a variety of economic reasons, however, it is now believed the developer will propose building only a two-story structure.

The council is also expected to take a stand on the controversial Dills Bill, SB 275, which would give public employes the right to strike and force binding arbitration in impasse situations.

Old packing house will become Mexican homes



LANDMARK RAZED

Demolition crews slowly tear down the old packing house once owned by the Claremont Citrus Association at First Street and Indian Hill Boulevard in Claremont. The original building was built in 1898.

Original Citrus Assn. building bites the dust

A Claremont landmark has been demolished but its bits and pieces will find a new home in Mexico.

Far in the past are the thriving days of the old Claremont Citrus Association packing house at First Street and Indian Hill Boulevard and the owner may have a parking structure in mind for the site.

But the crews who tore down the old structure in recent days loaded the well-seasoned lumber aboard trucks for a haul to Mexico where it will be used to build houses.

History of the packing house dates back to 1898 when a handful of citrus growers incorporated themselves as a cooperaive and built a one-room packing house 50 by 100 feet at the southwest corner of First Street and then Alexander Avenue.

Business increased and the 99-member association put up a $40,000 addition to handle an exceedingly large crop of navels in record time during the 1930 season.

Brands handled were Stork and Ibis, extra choice; and King and Heron, choice. About 125 employes were on the payroll during the busy season.

The building was later enlarged to 150 by 210 feet, with a basement excavated to provide for installation of a pre-cooling system.

A conveyer tunnel was built under First Street and the Pacific Electric tracks, now Southern Pacific, to a pre-cooling plant at the Union Ice Compa-

The original building is incorporated into the present three-gable structure at its northwest corner.

The association held yearly meetings and elected officers until 1954 when the packing house was bought by the College Heights Orange and Lemon Association.

High production year was attained in 1934-35 when 575,000 field boxes were delivered to the house.

Charles Cooke of Claremont and Oklahoma City bought the property containing the Claremont Citrus Association house, and the College Heights Orange and Lemon Association plant about two years ago.

Eugene Shrosbree of Upland, a general engineering contractor, has the demolition contract, said the lumber in the building is in excellent condition and will be taken to Mexico to build houses.

The Claremont Redevelopment Agency has hired a consultant to study the parking problem in the Village shopping area, across Indian Hill Boulevard from the packing house.

South Vietnam up against the wall

We may do as we choose about cutting off aid for South Vietnam. But there are facts we must face.

Newspapers have recently reported hundreds of thousands of refugees, with more coming, as more provinces fall or are given up because Saigon lacks the means to supply them.

This is in addition to 594,000 refugees in 1974, 818,000 in 1973 and 10,271,000 in the 10 years before.

A Senate committee estimates many more uncounted.

There is, of course, much duplication, in that some families have been refugees two, three and four times in the course of war. But however much one discounts the total, those fleeing number in the millions.

The refugees apparently are all going in one direction — away from communist rule.

A few years ago it was popular in some circles to say these men, women and children were fleeing American and South Vietnamese aerial and artillery raids. They didn't care where they went so long as they escaped this terror. That story no longer holds water. Today, it is the North Vietnamese who are able to mass superior forces and shall towns.

Note, too, that the local Viet Cong, once the backbone of the rural underground government and guerrilla forces, have given way to North Vietnamese units. It is now estimated between two thirds and three fourths of the Communist cadre and military forces are men from Hanoi.

The South Vietnamese army, once ridiculed publicly or privately by virtually ever American adviser, now fights well when not outgunned and outnumbered.

All this is a way of voting — the refugees who move in one direction, the decay of the Viet Cong, the new elan of the South Vietnamese military.

There are reasons for this new spirit. We have over the years developed in South Vietnam a viable government and economy, more and more influenced by capable young men. We have done much to eliminate decadent generals and to bring to the fore younger officers less tied to the old corruption.

South Vietnam has not become a democracy, except in contrast to the North. Freedoms are limited but are great when compared with the regimentation in Hanoi. There is still much economic and political corruption but less than the political-power corruption in North Vietnam. And there is less cruelty, again in comparison to the invaders.

We must also face the fact that the difficulty in which South Vietnam now finds itself is the result of sloppy negotiating by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Had Kissinger insisted in 1973 on an air-tight arrangement whereby neither North Vietnam nor the U.S. would resupply Saigon or the Viet Cong, and neither Russia nor China resupply Hanoi, and if he had made realistic inspection a part of the arrangement instead of phantom inspection which meant no inspection at all, we would not be asked today to send arms to Saigon.

We had before us the failure of toothless inspection teams in North Korea and Laos, subject to communist veto and therefore in no position to check on their violations. In North Korea, the treaty was grossly violated before the ink was dry. In Laos, Hanoi's troops never left. Resupply in violation of the agreements began immediately by Mao Tse-tung in North Korea and by Ho Chi Minh in Laos. The treaties failed because there were no means provided for enforcement. Kissinger knew all this.

South Korea was saved by two decades of U.S. military aid and the presence of U.S. troops. Laos held because this country organized one of the more skillful underground operations in our history and fought fire with fire until recently.

Clever gadgeteers

Americans no longer have the gadgetry field all to themsleves, if that is news to anyone.

For example, the Japan Economic Journal reports that a Tokyo firm will shortly place on the market a wireless headphone for receiving stereo music from a home stereo unit equipped with a special transmitter.

Wearing the headphones, milady can have music wherever she goes in the house by tuning into the transmitter on the first floor. In a wooden house, receiving distance is about 10 meters, or about 33 feet. Sounds from TV and tape recorders can also be heard by fitting an adapter. Price of the complete outfit will be 19,800 Yen ($65).

On the other side of the world, reports Electronics Magazine, a West German component maker is relying on homeowners' fascination with novelties to induce them to buy a new intergrated circuit light switch that operates at the merest touch by the conduction of the slight amount of electricity in the body of the person touching it.

It's estimated that the new switch will sell for five times as much as conventional household switches without dimmers. A key market is expensive new homes whose owners won't mind paying a few extra dollars for the novelty, convenience and reliability.

It seems that not only Yankee inventiveness but "conspicuous consumption" speaks with a foreign accent these days.

Ambassador Phuong and the press

Washington — While South Vietnamese forces are in retreat all along the northern front, President Nguyen Van Thieu is still taking time to silence his press critics.

In Vietnam, the problem can be handled easily with a dose of "law and order." Two months ago, for example, Thieu simply closed down five newspapers and arrested 18 journalists who had the temerity to criticize him.

Holding down Thieu's critics in the United States, however, is a far more delicate matter. The South Vietnam embassy in Washington regularly monitors the American press and dispatches reports to Saigon.

Ambassador Tran Kim Phuong also keeps his eye peeled for potential trouble and recommends remedial action to his home office.

Following Thieu's crackdown on the press, for example, a prominent South Vietnamese legislator mailed letters of protest to several U.S. congressmen.

His criticism was written on the letterhead of the "Council on Foreign Relations," an allegedly private Vietnamese public relations group which sponsors foreign junkets to Saigon.

Alerted by some of his Capitol Hill "friends," Ambassador Phuong fired off a confidential cable to Saigon urging that the situation be "clarified."

"Our friends on the Hill are deeply disturbed by a letter signed by Deputy Nguyen Huu Chung protesting against the arrest of journalists and the closing of newspapers in Saigon," Phuong telegrammed.

"Acting in his capacity as Chairman of the Press Liaison committee of the Council on Foreign Relations and using the Council letterhead, Mr. Chung's position carries special weight and lends the impression that the Council itself is against the alleged 'repressive measures.'

"Since many of our friends have been guests of the Council during their visit to Vietnam, a clarification from the Council seems to be most appropriate."

Ambassador Phuong's staff also cables a daily "press profile" of American news reports to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Saigon. A copy of the profile is automatically forwarded to President Thieu's press secretary, Ms. Cao Thi Lieu.

"The Congressional trip, the Cambodian crisis, and the aid issue continue to capture press attention," begins the press profile for March 5. It continues with an objective summary of articles and editorials which appeared in the Christian Science Monitor, Washington Post, Washington Star, New York Times, and Baltimore Sun.

Footnote: A spokesman for the South Vietnamese embassy maintained that Ambassador Phuong's telegram merely suggested that the Council on Foreign Relations should make it clear that Nguyen Huu Chung was not speaking for them. The spokesman refused to identify the Ambassador's Capitol Hill "friends."

JACKSON'S JUDGMENT: Sen Henry Jackson, D.-Wash., who is out in front in the Democratic presidential race, did some blunt talking the other day behind closed doors.

Meeting with Democratic congressmen, he excoriated President Ford, dismissed George Wallace as "overestimated" and "declining," and assessed his own chances as the "best of anyone who is now in the field." He even complained about being branded a "fascist pig."

The President, declared Jackson, "has been getting away with murder, going after Congress when in fact we are working on legislation he has vetoed.

"The people think we are sitting on our duff and aren't doing anything . . . Don't think Ford can get away with it. He is really sliding. In the end, the President is accountable."

Alabama Gov. George Wallace's strength, said Jackson, "is with the blue collar and lower-middle-income group (which is) teed off on everyone and everything. I think his strength is overestimated and is declining. This time, the economy is the issue, and I don't think he can pre-empt that.

"There is nothing affirmative in his program. In the polls, he has the highest negative factor . . . I have the lowest negative factor."

The usually cautious Jackson rated his own prospects as better than those of any other Democrat. "Our strategy is sound — to raise the capital, get a large direct-mail going," he said.

"We are head of the pack and have surpassed Wallace in fund-raising . . . We are planning to raise $7 million with $3 million matching (by the federal government)."

THE PUBLIC FORUM

Revenge will only cause more pain

The death of Arthur (Tudi) Garcia, a young man who resided in the Pomona 12th Street Barrio, was indeed a tragedy. Known as a peace maker, his death multiplied the horror and frustration that the Chicanos in the Barrios have suffered for so many years over what we have began to call senseless killings.

There have been others from many barrios that have died throughout the years during gang warfare. The Pomona and Chino police chiefs recently stated that the community would have to cooperate in order to solve this problem.

The significant message coming from these statements is that it finally looks like everyone in the community is willing to take the blame, be it private citizen or public servant. Now is the time for the Raza to come together and take action, as some community leaders in Pomona and Chino are already doing.

Our youth need guidance and understanding, rather than lectures, for perhaps Tudi's death has already created a wound in the hearts of our youth, which can only be healed by their efforts and hard work to create peace and harmony between our Raza.

To avenge Tudi's death will only create more pain, but to honor this youthful peacemaker and follow in the road of peace which he attempted to pave, would honor him and every Chicano in all of the United States.

Hundreds of Chicanos turned out en masse to say goodbye to Tudi and his comrades placed the Sharkie place (plaque) on his coffin, along with several red carnations.

Let us use these gestures to signify that he will long be remembered as a soldier of peace and that he died for all of our Raza. — Helen Fayloga, Pomona.

Just in jest

I note that State Senator Ruben Ayala has proposed the inauguration of a railroad commuter service between San Bernardino, Pomona and Los Angeles. If he proves successful in this effort, history may repeat itself and, after over 80 years, Pomonans would once again be enjoying some of the interurban railroad advantages which our Pomona Valley forefathers took for granted back in the good old days. But praisworthy as the good Senator's efforts are, I still have my doubts that he will be able to provide us with the railroad time table schedules Pomonans took for granted in the year 1892.

At that time the Southern Pacific was running three local westbound trains a day between Pomona and Los Angeles, one at 7:30 a.m., another at 9:30 a.m. and the third at 3:40 p.m. Eastbound to Riverside, San Bernardino and Redlands there was an 8:52 a.m. and a 5:40 p.m. train, and let's not forget the one to Chino and Ontario at 6:40 p.m. —Then there was the Santa Fe westbound to Los Angeles, Redondo and Santa Monica at 8:51 a.m.; the Los Angeles Flyer at 9:35 a.m., the Los Angeles and San Diego overland at 1:10 p.m., and a Los Angeles local at 4:52 p.m. Eastbound from Pomona the Santa Fe had the Redlands, Riverside and San Diego Flyer at 6:42 a.m.; the San Bernardino, Redlands and Riverside local at 10:04 a.m., and a San Bernardino, Redlands local at 5:27 p.m.

I said I have my doubts, but who am I to infer that what has been done before can't be repeated? More power to you Senator! Perhaps, thanks to you, we may once again hear that familiar warning shout made famous by the late Jack Benny: "All aboard for Azusa, Pomona and Cucamonga."

ANN LANDERS

Woman lying down on the job will not survive in world of business

Dear Ann Landers: I am not a big Women's Libber but I would like to focus on a growing problem in the American business community. I refer to the most flagrant example of male chauvinism. It is the hiring of female employes by men who anticipate sexual favors and behave rottenly when they are denied.

I, as well as some of my friends, have been passed over for merit increases, transferred to less desirable branches, given unusually difficult assignments, and hounded into resigning because we wouldn't play the game. In instances where there was no official grievance committee, these women have been fired, laid off, and written out of the new fiscal year budget.

You have taken the position that women who get a large number of passes must invite them. But no mention is ever made of the men who misread an attractive face or a great figure. A female doesn't need to wear ten pounds of makeup and walk with a wiggle for the boss to feel he has the right to ask her out, up, down, or to come across. —A People's Libber

Dear Libby: I'm sure in the vast world of business and industry a few male bosses operate in the skunky manner you describe. But by and large, Lady, there is no substitute for ability, competence and experience.

The woman who is lying down on the job (pun intended) will not survive in this competitive world where the bottom line is job performance — no matter how well she wiggles.

Dear Ann Landers: I resented that left-handed poke to divorce lawyers. The woman who wrote said, "Any lawyer worth his salt will do everything he can to get the couple back together before he actually goes ahead with the divorce." What an asinine statement!

Most people do as they please in the end. If they didn't want to split they wouldn't be in the lawyer's office in the first place. Any lawyer who practices general law will tell you that divorces are a time-consuming pain in the neck. If the woman isn't crying all over the carpet, it's the guy. They change their minds eleven times and when they get to the nitty gritty, they become grabby and behave like animals.

I say people who want to stay together don't go to divorce lawyers. If a couple is interested in saving their marriage they go to a counselor. — View From The Bridge By A Lady Who Knows

Dear Lady: Dozens of others wrote to express the same opinion. You all laid it on the line and I thank you and the others who wrote.

Dear Ann Landers: I have an answer to that 16-year-old girl who declared she was atheist — said she didn't need God in her life and signed her letter "Not Ashamed."

While saying his prayers, a little boy had his mind centered on his parents talking so much about this troubled world of ours. Having prayed for everything and everyone he could think of, the lad concluded, "And please, God, take care of yourself. If anything happens to YOU, we'll all be sunk."

How innocent and yet how true! Print it, will you please? — From the Mouths of Babes

Dear Friend: Here it is. And would you believe I have been looking in vain for a good letter from an atheist so I can run it? The best one I received was signed but I'm still waiting for the author's permission to print it.

Confused about what's right and what's wrong in today's "new morality"? You're not alone. If you want honest, down-to-earth information on your sex questions, read Ann Landers' new booklet, "High School Sex And How To Deal With It — A Guide For Teens And Their Parents." Cat could become allergic to rabbit

DEAR DR. MILLER: Could a cat be allergic to a rabbit? Our cat weighs 7 lbs., the rabbit 17. — S.M.

DEAR S.M.: Apparently you don't mean the food allergy. Though this is possible, it's highly unlikely that without considerable assistance your cat would be dining on that rabbit. A contact allergy — without any direct contact unless they're close friends — is also a possiblity. This could cause sneezing and other similar signs of allergy.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Pansy, my parakeet, gets a drop of cod liver oil. Some say that this is good. Some say it isn't?? —F.J.

DEAR F.J.: Summing it up, one drop of strictly fresh, good quality cod liver oil could be a valuable supplement for a parakeet, primarily because of its iodine content. Unfortunately, much of the cod liver oil given to birds is not, by the time they receive it, of good quality and hence becomes undesirable. There are better sources for the frequently-indicated iodine supplement in the budgie's diet.

DEAR DR. MILLER: The doctor said Jiggs was sick and very dehydrated. He showed us how the skin was dry by pulling it up on the shoulders and it just stayed there. Jiggs almost died. I've got to wondering since the doctor mentioned how important fluids are, if that pinch system is a good way to keep track of whether or not a dog's getting enough water? —A.A.

DEAR A.A.: Dehydration, fluid loss within the body with an accompanying loss of electrolytes including sodium, potassium and chlorides, is likely to be a critical condition in any pet. The pinch skin test for fluid loss is difficult to describe accurately, and for that matter difficult to use without some degree of experience. As a rough guide, however, a fold of skin over the neck-shoulder area when pulled up and twisted slightly, will tend to recede back to normal position slowly when the loss of body fluids (dehydration) reaches six per cent. (At a dehydration of 12 per cent, the animal is in shock and perhaps near death.)

The owner interested enough in his animal's welfare to check for signs of dehydration will probably notice other signs of abnormal behavior or function. Certainly it's a mistake to wait until an animal is obviously dehydrated before considering it sick. With some acute conditions, the animal would succumb before any dehydration became apparent.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Ripper, Raisin and Rascal, my rabbits, get fed only a regular rabbit pellet. It's a complete food, and they seem to do well on it. That's why I like it. I've checked and found it contains one-half of one per cent salt. Is this enough for them, or should they have a salt block besides? —E.M.

DEAR E.M.: No severe "salt hunger" would develop on this ration. Yet, additional salt would undoubtedly be appreciated. An occasional lick could break up the monotony a bit.

ERMA BOMBECK

Always new underwear for Easter

Generally speaking, mothers list five occasions that demand "new underwear" for their children.

They are: the first day of school, vacations, camp, sister's wedding and Easter.

The first four have always had logical explanations. Face it, for the first time two years of school, a child's feet never touch the floor. They hang upside down on a parallel bar like a sloth, stand on their heads in the sandbox, or stuff the hems of their dresses into their mouths an inch at a time. Therefore, why shouldn't a mother put the money where it shows?

New underwear on a vacation is a must considering the accident risk factor. What mother has not been tormented by the nightmare of a police officer yelling into the darkness, "Hey, Frank, I got one kid with a pin in his shorts with a broken arm, and a pair of pink tights with enough runs to account for overexposure." To which Frank replies, "Give me more light, I've got a dingy T-shirt you're going to have to see to believe."

I never send one of my children off to camp without borrowing a national slogan, "The quality goes in before the name (tag) goes on." Granted, a child never changes underwear the entire two weeks he is in camp, but counselors talk. I have the feeling they sit around a campfire and discuss what kind of home would produce a child whose wardrobe consisted of faded pink shorts.

My mother felt very strongly about new underwear at weddings, especially those in the family. She once went so far as to question the legality of the marriage vows if someone in the wedding party was not wearing new.

The only occasion that still puzzles me is Easter. I have never figured out what the "Second Coming" has to do with new underwear. When I asked my mother she clapped her hand over my mouth and said, "Just pray the Good Lord didn't hear you say that."

With the new underwear on this special day always went the pink and lavender Easter outfit and the patent cutout shoes. One year when Easter fell early, I remember Mama saying, "Tie the lavender ribbons on your bonnet under your chin." And I answered, "Those aren't ribbons, Mama, they're my ears."

Yesterday, as I laid out new underwear for the kids one asked, "Why do you have to wear new underwear for Easter?" I clapped my hand over his mouth and said, "Just pray the Good Lord didn't hear you say that . . . or if He did, pay attention to the answer."

LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Some reasons for those gas pains

DEAR DR. LAMB — What causes a large amount of gas in the stomach and colon? Do certain foods cause this? What can one do to avoid this condition?

DEAR READER— The gas is in the small intestine and mostly in the colon. The stomach proper seldom has gas in it except for those few souls who swallow air.

The air swallower often does this with belching. Each time he belches he takes in more air than he releases. This usually requires recognition of the problem and education to train oneself not to do it.

The cause of gas may be different foods for different people. A common cause is the loss of the ability to break down starches and sugars. This may be related to loss or normally occuring enzymes in the intestine that help to break these substances down so you can absorb them through the intestine.

When carbohydrates are not digested, and hence absorbed, they stay in the intestine and in the colon they undergo fermentation, releasing lots of gas.

A frequent offender in adults is milk. The double milk sugar (lactose) is not split into single sugars and can't be absorbed. It may cause diarrhea and distention or symptoms resembling a spastic colon. The way to find out if that is the problem or not is to eliminate all milk and milk products. If the condition stops, you can be pretty sure what the problem is. I always like to add that you can't do without milk or a milk substitute. You need something to provide the calcium you should get every day.

In other people, fats may be the main cause of gas. This may be associated with liver or gall bladder problems. Bile helps to emulsify the fats so they can be absorbed. If you have gall bladder disease you may not be providing bile normally, and if you can't emulsity the fats they are poorly digested.

These undigested fats increase the formation of gas and may lead to distention and belching. A person who has these symptoms when eating fried or fatty foods is suspected of having gall bladder disease. Unfortunately even if a diseased gall bladder is removed the symptoms may persist, at least to some degree.

Then there is the common problem of spastic colon. This is often associated with a diet deficient in bulk and poor bowel habits. The poor colon over contracts and causes cramps and pain. With abnormal colon function, gas is formed and adds to the trapped gas pains that can be excruciating.

This problem requires careful management and usually improves markedly by adding bran and whole cereals to the diet to replace white bread and products made with white flour.

The changeover may, itself, cause excess gas at first. But, for those who stick to a diet with plenty of cereal fiber and bulk, the problems diminish and finally disappear in about three weeks. With this improvement, the gas problems and sharp abdominal pains also go away.

So there are many ways gas can be produced. You can try different approaches and find out which foods are causing you the problem. This will go a long way in helping your doctor pinpoint and advise you on your condition.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on spastic colon, send 50 cents and a long self-addressed stamped envelope to the same address and ask for the "Spastic colon" booklet.

People reaching out

Youth's tragedy leads to outpouring of love

LAMAR, Mo. (AP) — It was one of thousands of letters Greg Dalton has received but cannot read.

"I strongly believe you have set off waves of love throughout the country," said the Colorado postmarked letter. "People care about each other, even strangers, and reach out to you."

Greg, 14, was class president and quarterback of the freshman football team, a handsome, talented youngster, when he was hurt in a gymnasium accident last November. He fell into a coma.

In January an Associated Press story told of Greg's tragedy and how the people of Lamar and surrounding southwest Missouri communities raised almost $4,000 to help meet mountainous medical bills.

Thousands of letters containing words of encouragement and donations began pouring into the Greg Dalton Trust Fund from all parts of the nation. The fund has grown to almost $15,000.

Greg's mother, Katherine Dalton, often reads some of the letters before falling asleep in a lounge chair in his hospital room, where, night after night, she prays that he will open his eyes and speak to her.

"When those letters started coming in they became the sustaining force for Greg's father and me," she said. "The love and prayers of the people of this country restored our faith."

After almost four months in a deep coma, Greg began showing improvement recently. He opened his eyes briefly, and sometimes laughs, sometimes cries.

He is still in a coma but doctors say they are cautiously optimistic.

Many of Greg's letters are from people who have known, or now are struggling with, hardships of their own.

One woman from Xenat, Ohio, sent $5 and wrote: "We are from the town so hard hit by the tornado of April 3 last year and have learned so much by that what a town and people can do for each other."

A woman from Sterling Heights, Mich., wrote: "Enclosed is my small donation to the Greg Dalton Fund. Though I am no longer employed, I feel that a dollar will not hurt me, and I know it can help this young boy's parents even a little bit. God bless them. May God see fit to return this boy to his family in good health."

"We have a son Greg's age," wrote a woman from Canandaigua, N.Y., who sent $1. "My husband has been laid off temporarily, or I'd send more. May god help you. Love from us."

A woman from Coronado, Calif., sent $20 and told the family to have faith, that her daughter had recovered from a similar brain injury.

A Rockville, Conn., woman sent $20 and said she and her husband, who was soon to undergo open heart surgery, were including Greg in their prayers.

A San Diego man wrote: "It's gratifying to know Americans haven't lost their compassion for the less fortunate. I admit that this small contribution represents my wildest wager for the Super Bowl . . . a vow I made [illegible] and which I hope was made by many other [illegible]." He enclosed $10.

Can't hide it from the little ones

Ever get the impression your youngster can read your mind? Maybe it's true. Researchers at the University of Utrecht in The Netherlands say their experiments indicate children as young as 4 years old seem able to read the thoughts of grownups to a remarkable extent.

ALASKAN oldtimers report that a herd of caribou won't pay any attention to a wolf that walks among them, so long as said wolf's head is held high. But if that animal drops its head and raises the ruff on its shoulders, those caribou light out. That's the attack signal, evidently, and they seem to understand it perfectly.

LIZARD

Q. "Can you identify the animal known as the Jesus Cristo?"

A. Believe you refer to that little basilisk lizard that walks on water.

Q."WHAT'S the American Vecturist Association?"

A. That's an outfit whose members collect transportation and parking tokens. Vecturist comes from the Latin vectura which means passage money.

Q. "IS IT NOT true that all mammals have exactly seven cervial vertebrae? Even whales?"

A. Even whales. Only exceptions are a few types of sloths, but sloths are kind of weird anyhow.

WHAT'S the second most dangerous animal in the sea? No, not the shark. That's the first most dangerous. Second is the Chironex Sleckeri. Better recognized as that jellyfish called the seawasp. Nasty little devil. Its sting can kill in three minutes.

THAT RENOWNED Broadway hit called "South Pacific" ran 1,925 performances, but technically never closed. On its final Friday night, the stagehands refused to pull the curtain. Members of the cast just sneaked off the stage one by one while the audience cheered wildly.

DO YOU REALIZE the coconut trees that flourish along the beaches of Palm Beach, Fla., have been there for less than 100 years? To be exact, it was in January of 1879 that a Spanish freighter with a cargo of coconuts cracked up in a storm off Florida's coast. When those coconuts floated ashore, they took root. That started it.

Could last 3 to 6 months

Pair's SLA murder trial opens Monday

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Symbionese Liberation Army gave its violent greeting to the world when it claimed credit for a cyanide-bullet assassination. Two young men go on trial for that murder Monday.

The SLA grabbed worldwide attention immediately with the kidnaping of newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst last year.

And it will be this Superior Court trial which brings the terrorist group under courtroom scrutiny for the first time.

Russell Little and Joseph Remiro have pleaded innocent to charges they ambushed Oakland school Supt. Marcus Foster in the evening darkness 17 months ago outside a school building.

The SLA claimed credit for killing the nationally known black educator.

Nearly three months later, Miss Hearst was dragged screaming from her Berkeley apartment. But Little, 25, and Remiro, 28, were already in jail, charged with the Nov. 6, 1973, Foster killing.

The trial — which attorneys say could last three to six months — could be tumultuous.

"As far as we are concerned, the court and the entire system can ....." Little told an Oakland judge March 6. That was after the two refused to enter pleas for an alleged escape attempt that left two sheriff's deputies seriously injured.

"If they become obstreperous, I may have to take some other measures," says Elvin Sheehy, the 68-year-old jurist who was called out of retirement to handle the trial.

Sheehy, who says he will work hard to insure a fair trial, pronounced the sentence on the last man to die in California's gas chamber.

But the maximum Little or Remiro can receive if convicted for the slaying is a life sentence, since the death penalty was reinstated only for crimes after Jan. 1, 1974.

Fearing action by the remaining SLA members — including Miss Hearst who says she has joined her captors — or other radicals, authorities are ready to wrap a maximum security blanket around the trial.

More than 30 Sacramento County sheriff's deputies will be assigned to security. Everyone entering the courtroom will be searched, photographed and asked for identification.

Despite all the preparations, the attorneys agree a crucial decision for the jury will be: What was — or is — the relationship between the SLA and the defendants?

"We are going to show the best we can that they are people who thought they were members of the SLA," says Clayton DaVega, an Alameda County assistant district attorney.

"There have never been any statements as such (claiming membership in the SLA) by the defendants," says James Jenner, the assistant Alameda County public defender who is representing Little.

"If we don't try the SLA, they'll get a fair trial," says Edward Merrill, Remiro's court-appointed attorney. "There's been so much adverse publicity about the SLA that if there's any association with our clients, people will have difficulty judging them on the murder charge."

Who are Little and Remiro?

Remiro was an antiwar activist who helped found the Oakland chapter of Vietnam Veterans Against the War in 1972. He participated in farm labor demonstrations and took part in Black Panther Bobby Seale's unsuccessful bid for mayor. He left the antiwar group in March 1973 to seek fulltime work as a mechanic.

Mrs. O.J. Little says her son graduated ninth in a class of 600 from high school in Pensacola, Fla. He studied engineering at the University of Florida at Gainesville, but took a degree in philosophy. After traveling widely around the United States, he came to the Bay Area in 1972 and took up visiting prison inmates.

Since Little and Remiro were arrested Jan. 10, 1974, the defense has made a blizzard of motions — some repeatedly in state and federal courts.

The defense failed to have evidence seized in connection with the arrest excluded from the Foster trial. The prosecution says the evidence includes SLA literature.

The defense also cited massive publicity about the SLA, especially since the kidnaping of Miss Hearst, in trying to have the trial moved from Oakland and Alameda County to Los Angeles. After appeals that reached the California Supreme Court, the trial was moved 85 miles to Sacramento.

Jenner says Los Angeles' ethnic mixture is closer to Alameda County. Little and Remiro are white.

The defendants are accused of murdering Foster on Election Day 1973 as he and Dr. Robert Blackburn walked to a car outside the school administration building.

As they neared the car in the poorly lighted lot, shots were fired from both sides. Foster, hit by at least five bullets from a .38-caliber automatic pistol, was killed. Blackburn, his assistant and now acting school superintendent, was wounded by a shotgun blast and .38-caliber slugs.

Police said witnesses saw three young people run from the scene.

Two days later, the SLA took responsiblity for the killing in communiques sent to a newspaper and radio station, saying Foster had been executed with "cyanide bullets" because he advocated photo identification cards for Oakland students.

Police first discounted the SLA claim, but then they revealed the previously undisclosed fact that the fatal bullets had been hollowed and filled with cyanide.

In the early morning hours of Jan. 10, 1974, a patrolman in Concord, about 16 miles east of Oakland, exchanged shots with riders in a van he had stopped. Little and Remiro were arrested.

Police said that the van contained SLA literature, that Little was carrying a .380-caliber Walther automatic and Remiro, a .38-caliber pistol.

Only 17 hours after the arrests, a house in Concord was set on fire. Police said they found more SLA literature — including a map of the Oakland school building — and that Little and Remiro had lived there.

On Feb. 4, Miss Hearst was dragged from her apartment.

On Feb. 20, an SLA communique called Little and Remiro their brave "soldiers" and demanded a televised news conference for the two. When the defendants then asked for such a news conference, a judge rejected the request.

On May 17, while Little and Remiro were being held at San Quentin Prison for security, six members of the SLA died in a bloody shootout and fire in a house in Los Angeles.

Only three known members of the SLA — including Miss Hearst — are still at large and sought by authorities.

No joke

4 billion people by April 1

By DAVE BARTEL
Associated Press Writer

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — By Dr. L. C. Nehrt's calculations, the world will soon mark one of those unheralded milestones in man's history, seldom noticed until the years have added to its significance.

Nehrt firgues about Tuesday the world's population will break the four billion mark.

"I was playing with the figures the other night and it suddenly struck me — four billion people," said Nehrt, a Wichita State University professor and consultant to the United Nations. "But, no one has said anything about it. I just don't think we should pass a mark like that without taking note of it."

Nehrt said his figures are based on United Nations data. The last U.N. World population total, published for mid-1973, was 3.86 billion people with a growth rate of 2.05 per cent a year.

"Those are only approximations, of course," said Nehrt, a specialist in international business and a consultant to the U.N. Development Fund. "No one knows for certain what world population is. India isn't sure, plus or minus 50 million, of its own population."

The best guess available must be calculated from the U.N. data or from figures of the World Population Council in New York. Nehrt said he has not seen any comment from either on the impending four billion mark.

In New York, an official of the U.N. Population Division said he could say only that the four billion mark will be reached sometime in 1975. He said the median projection for mid-1975 is 3.970 billion.

Nehrt, who has been a consultant to the Ford Foundation and the United Nations in developing countries of Africa and Asia, said that despite widespread malnutrition and starvation, he has seen little evidence of increasing concern about population control.

"In fact, many developing nations are going the other way," he said. "Some governments are encouraging population growth because they think the more people they have, the more important they can be."

The 48-year-old professor, himself the father of three, thinks it ironic that the mark could be broken on April Fool's Day.

Roy Clark: 1-man talent conglomerate

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Only someone as isolated from civilization as a Tibetan lama, could not know who Roy Clark is. In just 28 days, Clark, fixture of television's Hee Haw, taped 14 different nationally syndicated programs.

Delighted with such massive exposure, the ever-affable 42-year-old Country & Western singer says he would, nonetheless, welcome a slump just to catch his breath. But with his year-round schedule of hopping town-to-town in his private jet for one-nighters and video tapings, Clark has time for little else.

With his current popularity on a par with tax rebates, he feels now is the tme to diversify his talent to prove he's worth it all. That exhausts sill more of his precious leisure time for, in addition to the 10 million viewers who tune in HeeHaw each week to eat up his agile guitar-picking served with a side order of cornpone, millions more crowd into country fairs and rodeos across the Midwest and South to see their hero.

Upon his fourth appearance as host of the Tonight Show, Clark drew more viewers than any other guest host in that program's history. And comedy, variety or talk show guesting Clark, such as Mac Davis, The Odd Couple or Merv Griffin, where he frequently appears, can be assured of a quantum leap in viewer ratings that evening.

"I'm pleased with how things have gone for me," the six-foot, 230-pound singer understates. "But my goals have changed a lot in the past five years. My interests are different now and not always related to show business. For instance, I have learned that this country doesn't run itself and you really must involve yourself in what's going on."

That may sound like a man considering participation in some political campaign or public issue: "I would endorse a politician if I believed in him." Clark answers cautiously, "if I felt he was sincere, but I would have to be sure about this man, have to know all his views and have some idea about how he may change them once in office. Suppose he's elected and found to be a crook? That doesn't do much for a performer's image if he was helping in the campaign and is identified with the crook. "So far, the only politically related show I ever did was for George Wallace when he ran for president in 1968, but I was paid for my act and did not have to endorse him. It was not a benefit performance."

And there have been performances — 300 of them scheduled for just this year and covering 200,000 miles. Past performances have brought awards — 27 of them, including regognition for his comedic talents as well as singing and musicianship.

Clark scored a hat trick in Country & Western last year when he swept up all three top awards. He has also had a star dedicated to him on Hollywood Boulevard.

Such notoriety has its compensations. Clark considers his wellpublicized 11,000-acre cattle ranch in Tulsa, Okla., as just a business venture with his manager, Jim Halsey and another C&W great, Hank Thompson. Actually, Mr. and Mrs. Clark and their four children live in Maryland but he plans to move to Tulsa this fall.

In his pocket, jangle the keys to a $2 million Mitsubishi jet, a Rolls Royce, a Continental, a '32 Chrysler, a Model "A" Ford, two Harley Davidson motorcycles and a 43-foot yacht.

A publicist for ABC-Dunhill who Clark records for, disclosed with .002 karat candor, "Roy's management has promised to slit me from guzzle to zatch if I made the fact public that Roy's income is over a million bucks a year."

The wide sideburns on Clark's face shift up and down as he explains that in a few years, he hopes his crazy schedule will slow down and he will have more time to languish over his real passion — music. "I'm always interested in trying something new in music, seriously experimenting. Until Hee Haw, most folks thought there were two Roy Clarks, one who joked and sang, the other a serious guitarist. Hee Haw made people understand it was me doing both." There is no confusing his genuine warmth with another Roy Clark however. Despite his justifiable fame, Clark remains a likeable, down-home sort and not of the "good 'ole boy' category, either.

Snobs are stunned by this man when he reels off a stomach-wrenching pun between bluegrass ditties and then tosses the guitar aside, picks up a violin and executes as tender a passage from Paganini as they'll ever hear.

C & W, his real bread and butter he says, has undergone some obvious changes when it was enjoyed mainly by those below the Mason Dixon or by small pockets of fans throughout the country.

'Little House on the Prairie'

Michael Landon is ruling the roost

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — There is one important difference between Michael Landon and the real-life character of Charles Ingalls which he plays on the NBC series, Little House on the Prairie.

"Ingalls had a beard in real life," Landon says. "But I don't. The problem is that I can't grow a beard — it just looks like stubble. I wasn't going to play the part for six months with a beard glued to my face so I decided to play him clean-shaven."

Other than that, Landon is trying to keep the show as true to the original "Little House" books by Ingalls' daughter, Laura Ingalls Wilder, as possibble. Since Landon not only stars in the series but is the executive producer and writes many of the episodes he has a strong voice in matters of show policy.

"We're trying to stick close to the true story," Landon says. "The problem is the books were short and over four years — I think we can run four years— we'll need more than 100 stories. So we have to invent some.

"This year, for example, I was sick with meningitis encephalities for two weeks. I was wrapped in ice. That made me think of the show we did about a typhus epidemic."

There are plenty of chances for story ideas cropping up in Landon's own home. Someday, somebody (probably Mike) will write a story about the Landons and The Big House in the City.

There are really three families living at the Landons'. Mike has two adopted sons by his first marriage. His wife, Lynn, has a daughter by her first marriage. Together, Mike and Lynn have three, with a fourth—"and last"—due soon.

What makes the three families even more interesting is that each represents a different religion. Mike's two sons were raised in the Jewish faith. Lynn's daughter was raised as a Roman Catholic. Together, their three are Presbyterian.

"It really doesn't matter what religion they are," Mike says. "If you stick to the letter of religion they're all good."

Landon's long years on Bonanza developed him not ony as an actor but as a writer and director and now he's producing as well.

He says he is "slowly working" on a novel. He's written many screenplays but has not sold them.

"I think they are good," he says. "I've torn up the ones I didn't like so I have to believe the fault is with those who don't like them."

Eventually, he'll sell one. It's not exactly a goal because he gets enough satisfaction writing his TV shows but it is something yet to be fulfilled. He says he really has no great ambition at this point.

"Oh, yes, I guess I have one ambition," he says. "I'd like to play tennis better."

Experts say art helps create ethnic balance

Five artists participating in the National Conference of Artists convention this week spoke of the conscious pattern to use the arts as a vehicle of ethnic balancing.

They were among nearly 200 black performing and visual artists who gathered at Kellogg West, Cal Poly.

Ademola Olugebefola, Beah Richards, Dewey Crumpler, Lisbeth Gant and Tom Feelings are linked together in a spirit of comradeship springing from the same objective: communication.

"There is an inspirational wave length happening across the country," Crumper said. "Most of us are in tune with it. Writers write about it, actors act it, others turn it into a visual expression so you can see it.

"Maybe a lot of it has to do with the after burn of the 1950s and 1960s, coming into a real state of direction and pursuing it without detours along the way."

Crumpler, a muralist, received a bachelor degree in fine arts from San Francisco Art Institute and a master's in educational administration from San Francisco State University.

"My images deal with the universal struggle of people who are attempting to identify with certain things that relate to their struggle," Crumper said. "The murals have to do with those people of color who are struggling to gain political, economic and social freedom."

The Bay Area artist wants to elicit response, "to move people to enjoy or reject."

"People get confused with the general art market attitude of 'art for art's sake.' The essence of art is really communication of some sort," he said.

Crumpler, 25, looked toward the future when he obtains his master's degree.

"Educational administrators with a background in art will be able to thrust art forward in an avant-garde fashion. Educators so often are not artists and come to art not understanding the process of creativity. His primary concern is making the books balance, which is very important, but there has to be another element. I hope to be part of that element," Crumper concluded.

Miss Richards is best known for her dramatic stage performances of "A Black Woman Speaks" and "One Is A Crowd," and her film roles in "Hurry Sundown," "The Great White Hope" and "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" for which she was nominated for an Academy Award for best supporting actress.

Attired in an African drape splashed with green and gold colors and coiffured in a criss-cross pattern of Africasn corn rows, Miss Richards has captured the admiration and love of her colleagues.

A poetess, playwright and actress, she was presented an award by the NCA for outstanding service to black people.

"This is the frst time that I have seen the visual and performing artists together in a conference. They realize they are part of the same thing now and the artistic statement is to be made fully and completely," Miss Richards said.

She is convinced that money for black arts is not the most crucial need.

"I think we have as much money as we need. We need to have the psychological involvement of blacks. We really have no constructive notion of what we're about. This is what we're in the process of building and constructing now. We have all that we need to save ourselves for it is curselves that must be saved," she said.

Blacks have in the past been defeated psychologically, she said, and "this has to do with the images that we see on television of blacks. We are presented as one-dimensional chattel rather than three or four-dimensional human beings.

"As long as we permit the lies to go on, it will continue. If we have a conscious effort to speak from a black point of view, it necessarily will be different from a white point of view. The degree that both are true is the degree of unity that we can achieve."

Ademola, a native of the Virgin Islands raised in New York City, is a "renaissance man' for in him is the culmination of visual and performing arts. At the age of 33, he has achieved success as a set designer, art director, musician, commercial artist, painter, interior designer, graphic artist and art professor.

Ademola defined the purpose of the NCA as acting as a counter-balance against commercial ventures which are "harmful to the psyche of masses of black people, especially the youth."

"We are here to combat some of these images put out," he said. "NCA has a broad range of objectives: to grasp some control of institutions of higher learning, to serve as a conduit for placement of aware faculty and to publish educational material to further the aims and purpose of the organization.

"Art is an unifying conduit. It has an objective and reason and purpose. Art is only a reflection of life," Ademola said.

"Eighty per cent of our output comes from visual perception and intake. Commercials, pictures, television, the colors on your wall — all this affects the psyche balance. We must move art back to its original place as a unifying part of our lives," Ademola said.

Miss Gant, the West Coast editor of Essence magazine, also labels herself a communicator. Black art and black publications have the responsibility of working together for the benefit of the people, she said.

The raven-haired editor began free-lance writing after getting a master's degree from Columbia University. She lived and worked for several years in New York before opening the West Coast office of Essence in 1973. At 27, she continues the dual responsibility of her job with the black woman's magazine and free lancing with other publications.

"I see the challenge of an organization like NCA being to help teach its membership to manipulate the media," she said, "in as many creative ways as possible to insure that black people across the country begin to learn what black art really is and that it can have a function in their lives.

"It is the media's responsibility, primarily the black media, to educate and interpret the art so that this relationship and function is apparent to people. We cannot expect the majority of black people to support black artists simply because we are all black," Miss Gant said.

Tom Feelings, an illustrator for children's literature, recently returned to New York City after 2½ years in Guyana, South America. He was there on a special project to train illustrators for the government of Guyana "to produce supplementary textbooks in their own images. Guyana is a nation of people of color."

As an illustrator for books for young black readers, Feelings thinks books are a means of communicating self-images and liberating youth from the stereotypes that are nagative and do not afford opportunity for black awareness.

"Change the books you use everyday," Feelings advised. "It is not enough to go out and buy little supplemental reading books. The everyday books, the school books, are the ones from which they create their images."

Good food buys listed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lettuce, asparagus and potatoes are good produce buys in Southern California right now, a survey shows, with cucumbers, green beans and bell peppers poor in quality and relatively high-priced.

Steady prices were forecast for poultry and pork products with some reductions expected for ham. Pears and eggplant were listed as good buys, with steady prices forecast for apples, bananas and citrus.

Canned fruits and vegetables were listed as baragins, with some retailers passing along price discounts from canners. Canned green beans and corn were cited as examples.

While prices for paper products were expected to rise five to 10 per cent in the near future, sugar will continue to decline, the survey reported.

The price cutting in sugar is expected to spill over to soft drinks, jam and bakery products, although no large drops were seen in the immediate future

Harmless lamprey

The sea lamprey, an eel-like fish that sucks the blood of its victims, sometimes will fasten onto swimmers. Unlike leeches, however, lampreys apparently are repelled by warm-blooded animals and invariably let go. There is no record of a lamprey harming a human.

The 14-year-old undeclared 'Tuna Boat War'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "These men do what they must do, like their fathers and grandfathers did before them. The sea is still their mistress."

The wife of a young Portugese-American fisherman bit her lips as she spoke. Her husband, she says, is caught in a vise manipulated by selfish national interests and pride.

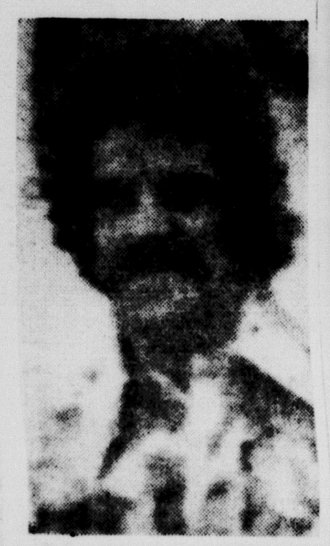
The 14-year-old "tuna war" is a standoff in which U. S. officials, for the record, refuse to intervene.

Although the United States tells its fishermen to stay only 12 miles beyond foreign shores, Latin American nations which claim 200-mile territorial rights are inflicting a deepening, wound economically.

There is no extra pay for "hazard duty." Ftt when the catch is confiscated, as Ecuador has done with seven seiners this year, it is the fishermen — and the owners of his boat — who suffers.

No matter what the difficulties, the pay back home is the same share of what they return with, according to spokesmen for the seiner owners and two unions to which the tunamen belong.

After spending six to nine months at sea, they take home to their usually large and patient families as much as $35,000 and as little as $5,000 annually.



JOHN SANTOS

Many of the fishermen are naturalized U.S. citizens born in Portugal, Latin American, Italy or the Philippines. The captains can make $100,000 a year. All income is computed on the size of the catch.

A health insurance plan is arranged through their unions. There is no industry retirement or disability insurance.

When fishing days are lost in captivity, the men and the boat owners share the losses alike.

Recently Ecuador forced 100 men aboard seven U. S. seiners to remain for approximately a month in the ports of Manta and Salinas, paying a total of $1.7 million in fines and penalties and giving up cargoes valued at $1.3 million.

Up to 70 per cent of the losses in fines is returned later in American taxpayers' money under the Fishermen's Protective Fund.

If one jaw of the vise squeezing the fishermen is being worked by Ecuador, which has claimed a 200-mile limit for 20 years (Peru also has a 200-mile limit), the other jaw is worked by the U. S. tuna overlords.

The caners and seiner owners demand the right to chase the migrating fish, as always, and point to their own government's stand in an international agreement that fishing beyond 12 miles belongs to everyone.

Now the worsening U. S. economy is cutting by $50 the price per ton which seiner owners set, and the single share of what remains after expenses and the ship owners' profits is what the fishermen take home.

The family's uncertainty is multiplied by the new risks taken by the working a routinely hazardous profession.

Two men have died since 1961 in the "tuna war," both Ecuadorian pilots whose search plane crashed at sea. An American was once hit by gunfire.

On March 7 there was a battle between Ecuadorian soldiers and crewmen of the seiner Neptune being held in Salinas.

A force of 40 soldiers reportedly boarded the Los Angeles based boat, beating and robbing the fishermen after a minor incident involving a crewman who disarmed an Ecuadorian guard on the captured vessel.

"These guys don't know where they're going," says Joe Silva, business agent for Local 33 of the Fishermen's Union, affiliated with the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

"If they refuse to go for the fish, it looks like mutiny."

Dr. James Joseph, president of the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Association, said in an interview that the world's fishing nations are "trying to solve the problems of jurisdiction" but expect it may take years.

In the 14 years since 1961, by count of the owners' American Tunaboat Association, a total of 210 member boats has been seized by other countries and before this year paid a total of $7.2 million in fines and penalties for fishing without 200-mile licenses.

Tuna, as the fishermen never tire of saying, is a migratory fish that knows no territorial bounds. The richest tuna schools tend to feed during the first three months of the year along the Pacific Coast from Mexico to northern Chile.

For the last two years, a change in the ocean currents kept the tuna well to the north of Ecuador. As a result no vessel was seized.

The Ecuadorians, developing their own tuna industry, attributed the absence of tuna to overfishing and decided in December to raise sharply the fines levied against boats caught within the 200-mile limit.

The government continued to allow boats to fish if they bought an annual license. But the fees were sharply increased, and no licenses were granted to boats weighing more than 600 tons.

Most new American tuna fishing vessels, including several seized recently, are over that weight.

Foreign fishing is also prohibited within 40 miles of the coast.

Ecuadorian officials, with a new ambition to exploit their fish resources; have reportedly advised the Americans that the best way to solve the conflict is to go into joint partnership or rent Ecuadorian ships.

Maria Santos, a 28-year-old navigator's wife who was herself born in the Azores in a family of Portuguese fisherman, says her father once made $23 for six months of fishing and "I used to tell my mother that I would never marry a fisherman because of what I saw her go through."

But she married John Santos, now 29 and fishing for a living since he was 18.

After he was on a captured seiner five years ago, Mrs. Santos recalls it took a year before he was paid for the lost time fishing.

The years since then have been good. The Santos paid $40,000 for a comfortable home in northeast San Diego's San Carlos area in 1971, for which their monthly payments are $290.

Their 7-year-old son, the older of two, wants to be a fisherman like his father, whose best pay was $38,000 "about four years ago."

Despite the problems, the men of the sea still show up regularly at docks in Puerto Rico and the southern California ports of San Pedro and San Diego, where the seiners are kept between trips, looking for work in an economy of growing unemployment.

"You never know when the next check is coming, and the worry is so great a times, but you can't get the men away," says Santos.

"At least 60 per cent of them still do automatically what their fathers did. Most of the young men fish right out of high school, figuring there's no sense going to college if this is to be their life."

Educators, Administrators

Feel court decisions on rights of students don't go far enough

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

Many educators, school administrators and children's rights advocates say the Supreme Court didn't go far enough in its recent rulings on the constitutional rights of students suspended from public schools.

Educational surveys indicate that at least one million students under age 18 are suspended from public schools every year. In the past, many had avenue for defense or appeal. Some weren't even told why they were being suspended.

Two recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions were aimed at correcting those kinds of situations by according public school students many of the same due process rights which adults enjoy.

But these rulings are not as far-reaching as many observers had thought. For example, the rulings do not require the suspended student's accuser to appear, and the student cannot cross-examine witnesses. The critics say more must be done to tighten up due process proceedings and to reassess the reasons for keeping children out of school.

"I think the combined ruling will have a substantial impact on the way schools treat kids," said Peter Roos of the Harvard Center for Law and Education. "We would have been more pleased if proceedings outlined for short-term suspensions had been more stringent. But the ruling is a leverage to force school districts and states to think through other suspension policies."

Cindy Brown of the Children's Defense Fund said the high court's move was an important first step in recognizing the rights of children. But "really more substantial due process proceedings should be used," she said. She called for an opportunity for appeal, the right to written as well as oral notice and an independent hearing for suspensions beyond two days.

A sharply divided court held in the first case, Gross v. Lopez, that public school students cannot be suspended without notice of the charges against them, an explanation of any derogatory evidence and the opportunity to present their side of the story.

The case was decided Jan. 22. It involved nine students who were suspended for up to 10 days in 1971 during the student unrest and racial demonstrations at Columbus, Ohio, high schools. They challenged the state law permitting such suspensions.

The second decision arose from a case in which three sophomores at Mena High School, in a legally dry area of Arkansas, were suspended for more than three months for dumping beer into the punch at a home economics class party. The court ruled 5 to 4 on Feb. 25 that students may, in some cricumstances, collect damages from school board members who violate their constitutional rights.

"We've been ahead of it," said James Dean, assistant superintendent in charge of the hearing commission of the New Orleans Parish School System. "The rules we operate under are more generous than the rules the Supreme Court demanded. For instance, the court did not insist that the parent have the right to bring an attorney to the hearing. We allow an attorney or anyone else to represent the student. The court didn't require cross-examination of witnesses. We allow that."

"Our policy is stronger than the Supreme Court decision," said Stuart Sampson, director of student relations, Louisville, Ky., Board of Education. Sampson said students in that system cannot be suspended without written notice, and parents must also be notified by telephone at the time of suspension.

The Louisville Board of Education will not suspend a student for more than five days. The court's decision in the Goss case was based on 10 days.

The Pennsylvania Board of Education last September adopted a regulation providing informal hearings for public school youngsters suspended for more than three days and formal hearings for anything over 10 days. The student may have a lawyer present to cross-examine witnesses and may also appeal the resulting decision to the courts.

The California Education Code requires school administrators to allow students to present their cases prior to suspensions during a meeting with the principal or vice principal.

No one knows for sure how many children are suspended annually. Most of the nation's 16,000 or more school systems keep such records, but the federal Office of Education does not.

The federal Office of Civil Rights made a study in 1972-73 of 2,908 school systems that enrolled between 90 and 95 per cent of all minorities.

The purpose of the study, said David Gerard, program coordinator of elementary and secondary education in OCR, was to identify those districts with an extreme disproportion in the number of minority students suspended to the proportion of minority youths in the total enrollment.

Of a total enrollment of 23.9 million children in the 2,908 school systems, he said, 42 per cent of those suspended were black. Total black enrollment was only 27 per cent.

For all races, Gerard said, the total number of children expelled from school or suspended at least once during that school year was 967,310.

The Children's Defense Fund also prepared a study last year of 7,500 children across the nation who were out of school for various reasons, incuding illness, physical and mental handicaps, pregnancy, disillusionment, expulsion and suspension.

Ninety per cent of those suspended were between the ages of 12 and 17, said Cindy Brown of the Fund. There also were repeaters, she noted: 16 per cent were suspended for the second time and 24 per cent for three times or more.

Stoltz-Coyne vows repeated in church

The Rev. Robert Burton officiated at the marriage of Miss Laura Ann Coyne and Kent Walker Stoltz in the Little Chapel of Flowers in West Covina.

The bride's mother is Mrs. Jean Marie Coyne of San Dimas and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stoltz of San Dimas.

Given in marriage by her brother, Daniel Coyne, the bride wore an empire gown of satin with a deep scooped lace collar. Clusters of lace accented the gored skirt.

Her fingertip-length veil fell from a lace headpiece. She carried mums, roses and baby's breath in the bridal bouquet.

The honor attendant was Mary Bell. Bridesmaids were Kimberly Oats and Colleen Coyne. Jeff Coyne assisted with gifts.

Serving as best man was Scott Martin while Paul Coyne and Ray Reese ushered.

The wedding and reception, in the chapel's Magnolia Room, were attended by 85 guests.

After a honeymoon in San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Stoltz will reside in San Diego. The groom is in the Navy and assigned to the USS Chicago.

Both are graduates of San Dimas High School.

Breakfast slated by auxiliary

The annual May Breakfast sponsored by Pomona Valley Community Hospital Women's Auxiliary has been slated on May 22 at 10 a.m. at the Ebell Clubhouse.

When the first May Breakfast was held 37 years ago, the auxiliary decided to make it an annual event to support the Sick Baby Fund.

Over the years, many families who needed assistance in the care of sick babies were financially aided by the fund. In addition, thousands of dollars went to equip the nursery and pediatrics wards at the hospitals.

The program for this year's event is "Heartbeat Follies" which will feature a variety of songs, skits and dances by members of the medical profession and community leaders.

Reservations for the breakfast are being taken by Mrs. Herman Wente, 593-3004.

Emera Club will meet

The Emera Club of the Order of the Eastern Star will meet Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Mary Hungerford, 427 W. McKinley Ave., Pomona.

Hostesses for the 1 p.m. meeting are Mrs. Harriet Johnson and Mrs. Jo Herring.

Popular tour

One of the most popular tours for visitors to Kingston, Jamaica, is the Blue Mountains Tour, a ride into the foothills of the Blue Mountains.

Det. Maxine McLean of the La Verne Police Department will be present to answer questions.

What's Going On At Griswold's

The Smorgasbord Walls are vibrating with the sound of 195 young people here on convention. Bnai Brith sponsors the group and a finer bunch of Kids you couldn't find. They have their breakfast and lunch here at the Smorgasbord and dinner at the Indian Hill. They're here for three days and (so far) the only prank was turning on the mike throughout the whole place while they were giving a camp yell. Have you ever heard 195 kids yell? Well we did. Other than a few dropped coffee cups, startled looks and my own cardiac arrest, we survived it. The energy level of 195 kids altogether in one place is truly unreal!!!

Ask Dr. Brothers

Pushing children

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My daughter is fighting to get on the local Little League team and I'm pushing her all the way into everything she can possibly do. My neighbors all think I'm wrong but I believe that any child, regardless of sex, should be taught to be a winner. My two sons were stars on our local football team.

My husband and I feel that sports build character and serve to toughen up kids so they're better prepared to meet the world. Do you think my neighbors have a legitimate point or should we continue the good fight? —H.Y.

Dear H.Y.: I'd guess your neighbors are overreacting and partly for what I'd consider to be the wrong reasons. Since I don't know them, it's obviously only a guess. I suspect they're objecting on the basis of sex or on the theory that it's never been done before so why start now? I don't feel either of these reasons, in itself, is valid.

I think it's good and healthy for little boys to see that little girls can do things as well or better than they and that talent is an individual matter. I think it's good for children of the opposite sex to be friends and to start building mutual respect early.

Typically, children of Little League age want to be with their own sex but this may be because of subtle pressures from adult society. Because they are unsure of themselves and their own sexual identity, they may disdain those of the opposite sex. This unfortunately, is often a source of amusement for adults. Usually, when children of this age do accept members of the opposite sex, they take them in as one of their own and as complete equals. I feel this is neither wrong nor unhealthy, but some psychologists do.

What I would question is pushing children of either sex into highly competitive, combative sports. I think the world is changing and we're beginning to have different values that place more emphasis on learning to cooperate and less on the old-fashioned superaggressive, tough behavior that was so valued in our past.

Realistically, everyone can't be a winner and certainly everyone can't win at everything. The child raised with too much emphasis placed on winning is apt to be tense, anxious and unable to see others as anything but enemies who may thwart his or her chance of winning. I believe parents would do well to emphasize and encourage pursuits where there are no winners and no losers, but where everyone works together for common creative endeavor such as building a tree house, planting a vegetable garden, or any other constructive activity.

Two California psychologists tested a number of athletes and their results suggest that athletic competition has no more beneficial effects on character than intense endeavor in any other field. They found that successful athletes had a low need to take care of others and a low need for affiliation. Many were so anxious to succeed that they suffered from severe emotional reactions to stress.

Sit down and have a long talk with your daughter to find out exactly how she feels about what she wants. Make sure she's not taking a stand only to please you. Let her decide and then stand by her

Ironically, the only area where your daughter, as an adult, will not be able to compete with men is in physical feats. She may have more talent and more brains but she's not apt to be physically stronger. She should not feel this is a limitation, however, for we have moved away from a period when the world is run by brawn alone.

Travel Film Series charts Friday film

The sixth presentation of the Claremont Travel Film Series for the 21st season is scheduled Friday at Garrison Theater at 2 p.m. and again at 8 p.m.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN R. ALBRIGHT

John Albrights mark 60th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Albright, 150 E. Alvarado St., Pomona, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary recently with a series of parties.

The couple was feted at a dinner at Griswold's Inn, Claremont, a dinner hosted by the Homemaker's Class of the First Baptist Church and a dinner at the Taco Kitchen in La Verne. Flowers were placed on the altar of the First Baptist Church on Palm Sunday in honor of the Albrights by their children.

Mr. and Mrs. Albright moved to California from Muncie, Ind., in 1927 and resided in Santa Ana two years. They have resided in Pomona since 1929.

Mr. Albright was employed by Pomona Pump Co., until his retirement in 1960. For the past eight years, he has been employed by Home Savings and Loan Assn.

They are members of the First Baptist Church.

Daughters of the couple are Mrs. Bud Henzie of Lakeside, Mrs. Bud Steger, Desert Hot Springs, and Mrs. Rhys Williams, Long Beach.

Photographer speaks Thursday at meeting

"Photography as an Art Form" will be the program for Rembrandt Club's Thursday meeting at 1:30 p.m. in Lyman Hall, Pomona College.

Leland Rice, lecturer in photography at Pomona College since 1973, will be the speaker. A Los Angeles native, Mr. Rice is considered "one of California's best young photographers" by the Witkin Gallery in New York City where he had a one-man exhibit in 1973 and will again have an exhibit in 1976. He earned his B. S. at Arizona State University and his M. A. at San Francisco State College in 1969. He was assistant professor at the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland from 1969 to 1972. He has had one-man exhibits at Carmel, Los Angeles, Chicago and Philadelphia.

Mr. Rice's talk will relate in particular to the exhibit opening in Montgomery Gallery Friday on the photographs and photograms of the famous Laszlo Moholy-Nagy, 1895-1946. Moholy-Nagy started out as a lawyer but by 1919 was painting full time in nonobjective compositions with geometric and constructivist concerns. In early 1920 he began his experiments with photography, creating "photograms" — pictures composed directly on film without a camera.

The exhibit will mark the first time the photographs and photograms have been shown in the west.

Bruins prevent an all Kentucky finale

STRETCHED OUT

UCLA's Rick Washington extends his 6-9 body to grab a rebound away from Louisville's Junior Bridgeman in Saturday's NCAA semifinal playoff game. Washington later canned the winning basket in overtime as Bruins won, 75-74.

Wooden says he'll retire after finals

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Richard Washington's jump shot with two seconds left in overtime gave UCLA a 75-74 victory over Louisville Saturday in an incredibly close and fiercely fought semifinal game of the NCAA college basketball tournament.

Coach John Wooden, who has guided a record nine national champions at the Los Angeles school, announced immediately after the game that he will retire from coaching after Monday night's national championship game against Kentucky.

Second-ranked Kentucky earned the right to meet No. 1 UCLA earlier Saturday when the Wildcats walloped Syracuse 95-79 as freshman reserve Jack Givens scored 24 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

Wooden, 64, who has been suffering from heart trouble the last two years, said Monday night's game would be his last as coach.

UCLA appeared beaten late in Saturday's game as Allen Murphy scored seven of his game-high 33 points to give fourth-ranked Louisville a 74-71 lead with 1:17 left in overtime.

But with 57 seconds left, the poised Bruins, 27-3, pulled within one point at 74-73 on two pressure free throws by All-American Dave Meyers, who sank the shots with 15,151 screaming fans on their feet.

Louisville had a chance to put the game away when reserve Terry Howard had a one-and-one foul situation with 20 seconds remaining. Howard, who had hit all 28 of his free throw attempts this year, missed and Washington snared the rebound for UCLA, which called a timeout with 13 seconds left to set up the winning shot.

The tensely-fought game, which was tied 17 times, was decided on that play.

UCLA worked the ball outside, then Marques Johnson fed it to Washington on the right side of the lane. His jump shot from seven feet was perfect, and Louisville's last-second attempt at victory failed.

Coach Joe B. Hall's second-ranked Wildcats made it to the final because of their strong bench, which simply wore down Syracuse in a game marked by 61 personal fouls. Givens had 24 points and 11 rebounds and 6-4 guard Jimmy Dan Conner controlled the floor game as Kentucky never trailed.

The second game was far different.

One of the 17 ties in the game came with 37 seconds left in regulation, when UCLA's Johnson tipped in a missed shot to make it 65-65. That basket came after a steal and completed a 15-second run in which UCLA erased a 65-61 Louisville lead.

Then Johnson further troubled Louisville with his waiving arms and the Cardinals threw away the inbounds pass, giving UCLA a shot at victory with 34 seconds left.

The Bruins had a chance to lock it up then, but Andre McCarter's driving shot was partially blocked by Junior Bridgeman. Bridgeman grabbed the rebound and Louisville had the ball with seven seconds remaining in regulation.

After a timeout, the Cardinals moved the ball downcourt and Bridgeman's 18-foot shot from the corner with one second left was wide, sending the game into overtime.

Murphy took charge of the game as the overtime period began, putting Louisville ahead 67-65 with a field goal and then giving his team a 70-67 lead with a three-point play. Murphy also scored his team's next two points on free throws, but missed on two other free throw attempts.

Louisville had a 72-69 lead with 2:20 left in overtime—in fact the Cardinals never trailed in the overtime until the final two seconds—but could not make the critical free throws that would have produced an all-Kentucky final.

UCLA won the exciting struggle despite a huge rebounding deficit. The quick, high-jumping Cardinals outrebounded the Bruins 49-36, but Louisville made critical mistakes when it could least afford them.

Wesley Cox had 16 rebounds and Bridgeman 15 to give the Cardinals the big edge on the boards.

Louisville roared away from the opening tipoff as if it was going to rout the proud Bruins and give Coach Denny Crum a victory over his former boss, Wooden.

After four early ties, Murphy triggered a nine-point Louisville string as the Cardinals opened a 17-8 lead with just over five minutes gone. Most of Louisville's shots in that stretch were from the outside, and the hot-shooting Cardinals threatened to break the game open.

But Louisville was not able to deliver a knockout punch, although the Missouri Valley Conference champions later took three more leads of nine points at 23-14, 25-16 and 27-18.

Refusing to be swamped, UCLA charged back, with guard Pete Trgovich doing much of the damage. Trgovich, who later fouled out, fired in three field goals as the Bruins scored nine of the game's next 11 points to cut the

Wildcats just too, too much

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "Too big...too strong...too deep."

That was Syracuse's assessment of Kentucky after losing a 95-79 decision to the brawny Wildcats in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball playoffs Saturday.

"We just didn't have the bench strength," said Syracuse Coach Roy Danforth. "I was hoping not to see a physical game. We knew we'd be in trouble if that's the way it went.

"It was impossible for us to press a team so deep. They're very physical, a lot like North Carolina. But they've got much more depth than North Carolina."

Syracuse had upset North Carolina 78-76 in the East Regional semifinals on its way to the championship round of four at San Diego.

Both teams were in foul trouble, but Danforth said that it hurt Syracuse much more than Kentucky. "We would have liked to press at the start of the second half (when Syracuse was losing by 10 points), but we had too many people in foul trouble," he said.

Rudy Hackett, the Syracuse star who fouled out in the second half, agreed with Danforth's observations.

"It's tough for us to play a physical team like the Wildcats," said Hackett. "They had as much foul trouble as we had. They had more people and they had a longer bench. We ran as much and as often as we could. But their style just beat us down."

Center Earnie Seibert agreed that Kentucky's awesome physical ability beat his team, but also pointed out that the Wildcats made fewer mistakes.

"Today, we just didn't get any breaks," Seibert said. "When we started to make a comeback in the second half, there were a lot of loose balls, but Kentucky got most of them. They capitalize very well on mistakes."

Danforth was not especially depressed by the loss. "I was very pleased with the way we hung in there," he said. "We got down by 20 with a lot of time to go and we could have quit, but that just isn't in our makeup. I'm very pleased with our team. I think this is the best team in the history of Syracuse basketball."

Vancouver ties Kings at Forum

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Defenseman Bob Dailey rifled a 30-footer into the net with 4:24 left in the game to give the Vancouver Canucks a 3-3 National Hockey League tie with the Los Angeles Kings Saturday night.

The deadlock gave the Division 3-leading Canucks 80 points, two more than Chicago and St. Louis, who are tied for second.

Dailey took the puck from a Los Angeles defenseman and drilled his 12th goal of the season past screened Kings goalie Rogie Vachon.

The Kings struck for two goals in the second period for a 3-2 lead. Defenseman Neil Komadoski connected on a 35-footer for his fourth goal of the season at the 15-minute mark. Garry Monahan of the Canucks tied it again at 2-2 at 17:17 but Mike Corrigan roared back 22 seconds later to give the Kings a 3-2 edge.

The Wizard calls it quits

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Coach John Wooden, who in 27 seasons at UCLA coached nine national basketball championship teams, said Saturday he would retire after Monday night's NCAA title game with Kentucky.

The 64-year-old "Wizard of Westwood" said his decision was final and that he had asked Athletic Director J.D. Morgan to relieve him of his coaching duties.

Wooden made his announcement just after his Bruins edged Louisville 75-74 in the NCAA semifinal at the San Diego Sports Arena.

"I have said before my most pleasant and satisfying year at UCLA was my first (1949). We were picked to finish last and won 22.

"My last year at UCLA is equally satisfying."

In that quiet manner, the winningest active major college coach in the United States said he would not be back.

Wooden said no successor has been named, nor would he recommend one.

"I'd like to be gone by Oct. 15 when practice starts," he said. "I don't want to be watching over anybody's shoulder."

Asked if he might coach somewhere else, Wooden answered, "No. I'll be 65 on Oct. 14 and I'll never coach anywhere else."

Wooden's 27th season at UCLA was his 40th in coaching after he won All-American honors as a player at Purdue. In those 40 coaching years, his teams won 684 and lost 203.

Wooden called play that set-up winning bucket

"We went back to the high post and rolled Richard down from the high post to the low post," Wooden explained. "We thought he was quicker than the man guarding him and could get the shot."

The 6-foot-9 sophomore from Portland, Ore., got the ball and sank it with a turnaround jump shot from the baseline to send UCLA into the finals.

"He's a cool player," Wooden said of Washington. "He's the type we like to go to in this type of situation."

"I'm glad the coach had the confidence in me for the last shot," Washington said. "I've never won a game with a last second shot before.

"Bill Bunton (of Louisville) went for the ball and Marques Johnson passed to me. I think Bunton stumbled going for the ball. When I turned around, I had an unbelievably clear shot."

When Wooden entered the dressing room, he told the club of his plans to retire following Monday night's NCAA championship game against Kentucky.

Jim Spillane, a second-year reserve guard, said, "He told the team how proud he was of the whole season and especially this game, and then announced he was bowing out with no fanfare.

"The announcement was met with a dead silence."

After Washington's shot, Louisville called two consecutive timeouts and then set up for a final play. The inbounds pass went to Allen Murphy and was not handled smoothly, but Murphy got off a desperation shot that fell far short at the buzzer.

Wooden said he had told his team, "Under no conditions would we do anything in the least resembling a foul. The main thing was not to foul."

The winning coach added, "It was a tremendous ball game. Certainly, you know as well as I, it could have gone either way. Like all year long, this team did not fold in the face of adversity."

Losing Coach Denny Crum of Louisville, a former UCLA player and assistant to Wooden, said he "did not want to get involved in any speculation over a successor to Wooden. He is the greatest coach who has ever lived."

Hank eyes another mark

By The Associated Press

The start of the 1975 baseball season will be like an instant replay for home run king Hank Aaron, even though he's with a new team in a new league.

A year ago, Aaron started his final season with the National League Atlanta Braves gunning for Babe Ruth's 714 home run record. He tied that mark in the season's opening game and then shattered it a few days later.

Now, playing for the American League Milwaukee Brewers, Aaron is after Ruth again and again, the record could come early in the season. This time he needs just eight runs batted in to surpass Ruth's all-time record of 2,209.

Aaron drove in 2,202 runs in his 21 seasons with the Braves, knocking in 90 or more in 16 of those years.

The home run king also holds a fistful of other records and with 3,600 hits is only 30 short of the No. 2 man, Stan Musial. Ty Cobb's 4,191 is the all-time record.

Frank Robinson, baseball's first major league black manager, also has some interesting targets to shoot for as he doubles as a designated hitter with the Cleveland Indians.

Robinson needs 26 home runs to reach 600—a total reached only by Aaron, Ruth and Willie Mays. He also is exactly 100 hits short of 3,000 for his career. If he manages that total, he would be the 13th man in history to achieve it.

Lou Brock, who established a single season record with 118 stolen bases for St. Louis last season, now has 753 for his career. That's 139 away from Cobb's all-time record of 892.

California pitcher Nolan Ryan has a shot at two records. he will be after his fourth career no-hitter, a feat managed only by Hall of Famer Sandy Koufax, and he will be trying to become the first pitcher in history to strike out 300 or more batters in four consecutive seasons.

Another pitcher, Tom Seaver of the New York Mets, became the first National League hurler to record seven consecutive 20 strikeout seasons when he reached that total in his final 1974 start. That tied him for the major league record with Walter Johnson and Rube Waddell, a mark Seaver will try to break this year.

Bob Gibson, starting what he says will be his final season of pitching for St. Louis, ranks second in career strikeouts with 3,057, trailing only Johnson's 3,508. With 248 victories, Gibson is the winningest active hurler and his 56 career shutouts give him the lead among active pitchers in that department too.

Two American League pitchers, Detroit's Mickey Lolich and Gaylord Perry of Cleveland, are also close to important plateaus. Lolich, with 2,340 strikeouts, ranks seventh on the all-time list and can pass both Bob Feller's 2,581 and Warren Spahn's 2,583 this season. Perry has 198 career victories and with two more, he would join his brother, Jim, as a 200-game winner. No other pair of pitching brothers have achieved 200 victories each.

Third American record falls to Troy's Naber

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sophomore John Naber set three American records in three days and led Southern California to its second straight victory in the NCAA Division I swimming and diving championships at Cleveland State University Saturday night.

Naber's time of 1 minute, 46.82 seconds bettered the American and NCAA records of 1:48.95 that he set last year.

He was well out in front of second-place Bill Schulte, Indiana, who was clocked in 1:50.36.

Thursday, Naber set an American record with a 4:20.45 in the 500-yard freestyle, and he set his second record in the 100-yard backstroke with a 49.94 Friday.

In another record performance, Alabama freshman Jonty Skinner set an American mark with a time of 43.92 in the 100-yard freestyle.

Skinner's time at the Cleveland State University pool eclipsed the mark of 44.50 posted by Dave Edgar of Tennessee in 1971. It also bettered an unofficial record of 43.99 posted by Andy Coan, a Pine Crest, Fla., high school pupil, in February.

Defending champion Joe Bottom of Southern California was second at 44.82 and Dave Fairbank of Stanford was third at 44.89.

The 1,650 freestyle title was taken by Michael Bruner of Stanford with a time of 15:18.54. Ron Orr of Southern California was right behind him in second place at 15:18.66.

John Hencken, a Stanford junior, retained his 200-yard breaststroke title and set an American record with a time of 2:00.83. The old record of 2:01.43 was set by Rick Colella of the Totem Lake Swim Club in 1974.

It was Hencken's second victory of the meet. He broke his own NCAA record in the 100-yard breaststroke with a time of 55.59 Friday.

Dave Wilkie of Miami, was second at 2:01.49 and Alabama's Kevin Williams was well off the pace in third at 2:04.49.

Robin Backhaus of Washington successfully defended his 200-yard butterfly title with a time of 1:47.16. Alabama's Mike Curington was second at 1:48.40 and Steve Gregg of North Carolina State was third at 1:48.59.

UCLA coed sets records

VALENCIA, Calif. (AP) — Julie Brown, a sophomore at UCLA, established women's world records in the six-mile and 10,000-meter runs Saturday in the Southern Pacific AAU womens's 10,000-meter championships at College of the Canyons.

Miss Brown, 19, was timed for six miles in 33 minutes 52.8 seconds and for the 10,000 in 35:00.4.

UCR wins own tournament

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Kim Allen slashed a single with one out in the bottom of the eighth inning Saturday night, breaking a tie and helping UC Riverside defeat Stanford 7-4 to win the Riverside National Intercollegiate baseball tournament.

Allen, the tourney's most valuable player, scored Herb Tiedemann from third base with the run which broke a 4-4 tie. Allen wound up the day with six stolen bases, five in a 12-11 UCR victory earlier in the day over Arizona which put the Highlanders in the finals.

Stanford made the finals with a 4-0 triumph over Santa Clara.

Nicklaus' big lead erased with his 74

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus heaved a heavy sigh, ran a hand through his mane of blond hair and rubbed his face in weary exasperation.

"Well," he said, "it's the same guy 11 shots later."

Nicklaus, who had composed an 63 in Friday's play, had just blown to a struggling 74 in Saturday's third round of the $200,000 Heritage Golf Classic.

His surprising collapse, combined with Tom Weiskopf's solid, three-under-par 68, completely dissolved Nicklaus' once-commanding six-shot lead and left the two in a tie for the top going into today's final round of the chase for a $40,000 first prize.

"Obviously, I'm not too pleased," Nicklaus said. "I liked my position the day before a lot more.

"But," he continued, "it's like I told Angie (his caddy) coming up 18. It's nice to have that big lead so that if a day like this comes along, you can shoot a score like this and still be in pretty good shape going into the last round."

He was in better shape at that precise moment than he was when he finished.

The national television cameras cut away before he played the 18th. They left the viewing audience with the impression that Nicklaus had a one-stroke lead. And he did.

But he three-putted the 18th, missing from 2½ feet on his second putt, for the bogey that dropped him back into a tie.

"It's like I said before," Nicklaus said. "If you hit good shots, this course will reward you. If you play bad shots, this course will penalize you.

"I hit some bad shots and I got penalized."

Ryan fans nine in Angels' win

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Nolan Ryan, two weeks behind his personal training schedule, threw five strong innings Saturday and Joe Lahoud and Bobby Valentine drove in two runs apiece in leading the California Angels to a 5-3 triumph over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Ryan, returning after an enforced 10-day layoff due to a calf muscle tear in his right leg, struck out nine, walked four and yielded one run on two hits. He will pitch once more before working the season opener April 7 against Kansas City.

Lahoud had a triple and double, and it was his pop fly two-bagger which drove in the winning run as the Angels scored twice in the eighth inning to snap a 3-3 tie.

John Balaz opened the Angel gates with a single and Mickey Rivers bunted for a base hit. After Tommy Harper forced pinch-runner Rudy Meoli at third, Lahoud delivered his Texas League double to score Rivers. Valentine followed with his second run producing sacrifice fly to get Harper home.

The victory was California's 14th in 18 spring exhibitions and their ninth in 10 games at Palm Springs.

Don Kirkwood hurled the final four innings to record the win. He permitted two runs — one unearned—and four hits.

The Angels managed seven hits against starter Pete Broberg and loser Williams Castro, who was tagged for four hits and three runs in two innings.

Tim Johnson had triple, double and single to account for half the Brewer hit total.

The Angels conclude their Palm Springs schedule Sunday when they face the San Francisco Giants.

Napoles wins disputed bout

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — World welterweight champion Jose Napoles of Mexico stopped challenger Armando Muniz of Los Angeles in the 12th round Saturday night in a bloody World Boxing Council championship fight.

In a disputed ruling, referee Ramon Berumen stopped the fight in the 12th round of the scheduled 15-rounder. He gave the decision to Napoles, although the champion was bleeding badly from both eyes and virtually unable to defend himself. Berumen said the cuts were caused by the challenger's head.

The 35-year-old Napoles, in his 14th title fight, is recognized as welterweight champion by both the WBC and the World Boxing Association. However, only the WBC classified the bout as a title match.

MSAC spikers perform well at San Jose meet

SAN JOSE — Mt. San Antonio College's track team captured one victory, three seconds and two thirds at the San Jose Relays Saturday.

In the non-scoring affair, the Mounties' mile relay team of John Houston, Steve Simmons, Dave Kellogg and Willie Davis placed first in a time of 3:17.7. That time stands as the second fastest so far this year in Southern California among the junior colleges.

The Mounties' half mile relay team of Houston, Rickie Jackson, Steve Lebovitz and Don Reeves finished second in 1:29.0. The MSAC time also stands as the second best in Southern California this year.

MSAC hurdlers Andre Hall and Dwight Owens took second-place finishes in the 120 highs and the 440 intermediates. Hall, a freshman from Pomona High, lost a photo-finish decision and ended up second in the 120 highs in 14.6 seconds. Owens, clocked the second best time in Southern California in placing second in the 440 intermediates in 54.5 seconds.

The Mounties' quarter mile relay team of Houston, Lebovitz, Jackson and Owens finished third in 42.3 seconds. San Jose City posted the best time in the state in winning with a 40.7-second clocking.

MSAC javelin thrower Victor Glover also took a third with a mark of 177-9.

Other top performers for the Mounties included Stan Bland's fourth-place finish in the triple jump at 47-2 (seasonal best), and Charles Stewart's third place in his heat of the 440 intermediate hurdles in 56.6 seconds. That was his all-time best in the event.

Blalock wins golf classic by one stroke

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Jane Blalock birdied four of the first five holes Saturday en route to a four-under-par 68 at Camelback Country Club to win the $70,000 LPGA Golf Classic.

Miss Blalock, playing two days after winning a court settlement against the Ladies Professional Golf Association, finished the 54-hole tournament with at 209, seven-under-par, to nudge JoAnne Carner by one stroke for the $10,000 first prize.

Sandra Haynie closed with 69 to take third place at 211. Kathy Ahern and Gerda Boykin, who had final round 70s, tied for fourth place at 212.

Miss Blalock trailed Mrs. Carner by two strokes going into Saturday's final round. She quickly took the lead with the four birdies, sinking putts of 2, 15, four and 15 feet.

Miss Blalock, playing in the same group with Mrs. Carner, maintained the lead throughout. But she admitted she had some thoughts after Mrs. Carner, last year's leading money winner, rolled in a long birdie putt on the 309-yard 16th hole.

No-hitter, grand slam pace APC

Two Azusa Pacific College pitchers combined to hurl a no-hitter, Steve Alonso jolted a grand slam home run, and Paul Moskau allowed two hits and also hit two home runs as the Cougars swept a doubleheader from visiting Cal Baptist Saturday, 9-0, and 12-2.

In two games played late Friday night, La Verne College tied UC Santa Barbara, 2-2, and then dropped a 4-3 decision to Oregon State at the Las Vegas Tournament..

Terry Sheehan and Craig Lynch kept Cal Baptist hitless in the first game, with Sheehan going six inning while fanning five and Lynch going one with two strikeouts.

In that opener, Alonso blasted a grand slam home run in the first inning. Then in the second inning, Moskau slugged a two-run homer and Tony Barbone followed immediately with a solo round-tripper.

Moskau started for the Cougars on the mound in the second game, fanning 11 of the six innings of work. He gave up only two hits while he was on the mound.

Paul aided his own cause when he clouted a three-run homer in the Cougars' six-run first inning. He finished the day going four-for-eight with two home runs, a double, a single and five RBIs.

Barbone and Bob Reeves collected three hits each in the two games.

APC is now 12-9 for the season and 2-4 in independent conference competition. The Cougars next visiting Pacific Christian Tuesday at Anaheim's LaPal

Broncos fall to touring Utah club

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Correspondent

Cal Poly might have wished for more rain Saturday!

Until Friday's narrow win over Oregon, the Broncos hadn't played a baseball game since March 4 because of final exams and wet weather.

Touring University of Utah scored six runs in the eighth inning and weathered a Poly ninth inning uprising to record a 7-6 win over their Southern California hosts.

The Utes (4-1), playing only their fifth game of the season because of snow and below freezing temperatures in their home Salt Lake City, have begun their 1975 campaign with a 10-game road trip against some of the Southland's top competition. (UCLA, USIU, U. San Diego, San Diego St).

Coach Tom Kilgore's Utes bunched together five hits and two walks in the eight inning to produce six runs and take a 7-2 lead.

The Broncos bounced right back with a pair of markers on an error, two walks, Jim Pryor's RBI hit (his third hit of the game) and a fielders choice off Utah starter Russ Rosander (2-0) to cut the deficit to 7-4.

Poly got closer with two runs in the ninth as three straight walks off reliever Steve Long loaded the bases.

Utah freshman southpaw Dave Pierce, seeing his first varsity experience, struck out Dave Metkovich and walked Clay Harris to force across a run. Pinch-hitter Ray Pekarcik grounded out to drive in another run and pinchhitter Alex Torres popped out to end the game.

"We gave up. . . then started to come back," said Scolinos, after the disappointing loss, Poly's 12th in 18 starts. "They're a good ball club. They do a good job. We can't use the weather as an excuse for our play.

"We played stupid baseball. We took outselves out of three innings," continued the veterans coach, referring runners being thrown out at the plate in the second and third innings. Each time with just one out. "We played poor baseball today."

Both teams struck early as Utah tallied a first inning run on a walk, steal and Joe Nichols' single. Poly retaliated with two runs on a walk, Dennis Sherow's triple and John Springman's first of three hits.

Pitching dominated the next seven innings as Poly's Barry Traynor, who has missed most of the season because of a sore arm, hurled five innings of hitless ball before beginning the horrid eighth by yielding a run on three hits.

Ace Vic Bernal couldn't retire any of the next three batters, allowing a hit and two walks, and Bruce Kistner gave up a hit before getting the final two outs.

Sandoval loses decision at Golden Gloves finals

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Albert Sandova, a product of the Pomona Athletic League, lost on a decision to Leo Randolph of Rocky Mountain, Colo. Saturday night at the finals of the national Golden Gloves boxing tournament here.

Sandoval, boxing in the 112-pound category, had scored a knockout in the third round over Steve Hilyard.

Defending heavyweight champion Emory Chapman let loose with a flurry of high-powered leather and knocked out challenger Johnny Tate to retain his title.

Two other defending champions also retained their titles. One was an upset.

Clinton Jackson gained a decision over Odell Leonard in the 147-pound division. Claudell Atkins outpointed Mike Huckabee to keep his 106-pound class crown.

The upset occurred when Tom Sullivan beat defending 165-pound titleholder Michael Spinks.

Dodgers shell Red Sox to win fifth consecutive

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers rocked Boston's Reggie Cleveland for 14 hits and 10 runs in five innings and cruised to their fifth straight exhibition victory Saturday, defeating the Red Sox 10-4.

Steve Garvey and Ken McMullen homered for the Dodgers' final three runs in the fifth before Rogelio Moret replaced Cleveland and stopped the National League champions the rest of the way.

The Dodgers, who have won 12 of their last 13 starts and 14 of their last 16, nailed down the decision by sending 11 batters to the plate in a six-run second inning.

Garvey and Manny Mota had three hits each for Los Angeles, while Davey Lopes, Bill Buckner, Joe Ferguson, McMullen and Steve Yeager chipped in two apiece.

Southpaw Al Downing allowed Boston only one hit, a pop double to shallow center by Dwight Evans, in the first six innings. However, he was wild, issuing six walks. Eddie Solomon surrendered six hits in the last three innings.

The Dodgers, now 15-5 for the spring, have pounded out 62 hits and scored 44 runs during their current five-game win streak.

Downings' start was his first of the spring. He struck out four and walked six. The only hit he surrendered was a bloop double in the third inning by Dwight Evans.

Of the Dodgers' 17 hits, Garvey and Manny Moto each had three and Dave Lopes, Bill Buckner, Joe Ferguson and Ken McMullen had two apiece.

Eddie Solomon pitched the last three innings and gave up six of Boston's seven hits.

The Dodgers close out the Florida phase of the exhibition season today with a rematch with the Red Sox at Vero Beach. Andy Messersmith will start for the Dodgers, Rick Wise for the Red Fox. Monday morning the Dodgers fly to Phoenix where they will meet the San Francisco Giants Monday night.

Stottlemyre released by N.Y. Yankees

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Mel Stottlemyre, one-time pitching ace of the New York Yankees, was placed on waivers Saturday for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

The 33-year-old right-handed veteran, last of the 1964 American League champion Yankees, injured his pitching shoulder last June 11 and worked only two innings the remainder of the season.

In spring training this season he pitched only briefly in batting practice. His arm stiffened up after a stint earlier this week.

Stottlemyre won 20 games three times and was named to the All Star team five times.

"I'm not surprised, but I'm disappointed," said Stottlemyre. "But I'm not convinced whether I'm through or not." He said he would be in contact with several clubs including Detroit, managed by former Yankee boss Ralph Houk.

"I want to collect myself before I see them," he said.

Stottlemyre broke into the majors in August 1964 and helped the Yankees to the AL pennant—their last—by posting a 9-3 record and a 2.06 earned run average.

He posted a 20-9 mark in 1965; 21-12 in 1968 and 20-14 in 1969. He wound up last season with a 6-7 record and a 3.58 ERA. His over-all won-lost record was 164-139 with a 2.97 ERA.

He suffered a torn rotator cuff of his right shoulder in a game against California last June.

Cal Poly spikers defeated

By JIM McCONNELL
P-B Correspondent

LOS ANGELES — Host school Cal State Los Angeles surprised the Cal Poly Pomona track squad Saturday, scoring a 86-65 dual meet victory over the Bronco thinclads.

The Diablos also captured the triangular meet between themselves, Cal Poly and Cal State Bakersfield. CSLA amassed 104 points to Poly's 72 and Bakersfield's 13 in the tri-meet scoring.

Injuries and sub-par performances hampered the Bronco effort. Missing from competition were top-notch Poly sprinters Michael Lay and David Duffy, both out with injuries. Long and triple jumper Bobby Jones also missed the meet due to injury, as the Broncs suffered unexpected setbacks in the jumping events and the dashes.

CSLA'S Billy Derrick captured the long jump with a leap of 22-11½, with Diablo Clinton Hayes taking second. Poly's Mike James could do no better than fourth in the long jump, an event Poly expected to sweep.

In the 100-yard dash, Larry Rowles of CSLA hit the tape first in a slow 9.9 clocking. John Foye of L.A. was second and Bakersfield's Marvin Blackwell third as Poly was shut out in an event which is normally their strength.

The 220 also went to Rowles, with Broncos David Yates and Mike Harris settling for second and third.

Suppling some encouragement to Poly coach Fred Jones was the performance of his weight men. Chaffey JC transier Lonnie Carr captured the shot put with a 1975 best of 52-4¼. Russ Reabold, competing for the first time this season in the shot, recorded a heave of 48-8 for fourth place in the meet.

Tim O'Connor and John Sedia took a second and fourth respectively in the javelin, while John Carrillo recorded a toss of 145-11 in the discus, his best this year.

Hurdler Paul Nelson turned a personal lifetime best of 55.6 in the Intermediates to finish second behind Harry Frierson in that event, out CSLA swept the two mile, finished one-two in the high jump, and two-three in the triple jump to nail down the dual meet win.

The Broncos now must hope to get well for their tri-meet next Saturday at UC Irvine. Poly, now 1-2 in dual meet action, will tangle with host school Irvine and Westmont College beginning at 1 p.m.

UCLA prevents all Kentucky finale

Louisville lead to two at 29-27 with 5:36 remaining in the half.

The teams were then locked in three ties before UCLA took a 33-32 lead on two foul shots by Washington, who scored 26 points to lead his team. But Louisville regained control of the game's flow, the everpresent Murphy hitting two free throws and Bill Bunton scoring three points to give the Cardinals a 37-33 halftime lead.

The second half was as tight and tense as the first.

The biggest lead in the second half was six points, when Murphy connected on a jumper to put Louisville on top 59-53 with 5:03 remaining.

But, as was to happen later, the Cardinals could not hold onto the game's tempo and UCLA rushed back with six straight points to tie the game at 59-59 with 4:23 remaining on baskets by Trgovich, Meyers— who had 16 points—and Washington.

Washington gave the Bruins a 61-59 lead with a field goal before Cox tied it once more with 3:20 to go. Then Louisville had the opportunity to take over the game again, moving out in front 65-61. But UCLA tied it again, setting the stage for the final maneuverings.

From the outset of the first game, it was clear that Kentucky's size was hurting Syracuse, and when the game saw one foul after another whistled by two active officials the Wildcat bench was too much for the Orangemen. There were 61 fouls called and 70 free throws shot.

After a tie at 4-4, Kentucky moved out in front when center Rick Robey hit a layup and two free throws. When starting forward Bob Guyette picked up his third foul after only four minutes, Hall went to his bench.

The man he grabbed was Givens, and that was not good for Syracuse. Altogether, Hall used 11 players in the first half and 14 over-all.

Syracuse, 23-8, showed poise and determination in the face of Kentucky's obvious power, but the Orangemen had great difficulty breaking the Wildcat's man-to-man defense and Syracuse trailed 44-32 at the half.

Then with Conner, Kevin Grevey and Rick Robey scoring at will, the Wildcats rattled off 10 straight points in the first 4:20 of the second half to open a 54-32 lead. Rudy Hackett then scored for Syracuse and the Orangemen mounted a rally of its own that cut the Wildcats' lead to nine points on one occasion.

But that was as close as Syracuse ever got.

Jim Lee, who led Syracuse with 23 points, sank three straight field goals in the Orangemen's rally. But it was not enough and the rally could not be sustained.

Following Givens among the Kentucky scorers were Grevey, who had 14 before fouling out, and Conner, who had 12 for the balanced Wildcats.

Kentucky utilized power, depth and the thievery of the pesky Conner to build a 12-point lead at 32-20 just after the midpoint of the first half.

By that time, Hall had called on five players off his bench, and it didn't seem to matter who he played. After Givens there was James Lee and Merion Haskins, then 6-10 backup center Mike Phillips, then Larry Johnson and Jerry Hale.

Hackett, Earnie Seibert and Chris Sease, the starting front line for Syracuse, also each had three fouls by halftime. But Syracuse Coach Roy Danforth just did not have a bench to match Hall's.

Sease had 18 points for Syracuse, 14 of them in the second half when the Orangemen made several futile runs at the Wildcats.

The Kentucky power showed under the backboards, where the Wildcats had a 57-40 edge in rebounding.

JIM DENT says, "I'd rather be known as a good putter than a big hitter. You could hit it 100 miles off the tee but it wouldn't do you an good if you can't get it in the hole." A fellow pro added, "Jim can launch a shot to the moon. Unfortunately, he's playing on earth."

LEE TREVINO talking about his putting: "I'm really rolling the putter good. I started at the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic, turning my left hand under the club, so the back of the hand almost is facing the grund. Now, when I get the club back, I can't break my wrists. This is the way I putted three or four years ago, but, for some reason, let my hand move towards the top of the club." He said that, with his hand on top, he could not properly accelerate the clubhead toward the hole consistently.

POMONA CITY Councilman Adrian Wright made a hole in one while playing in a Pomona Chamber of Commerce foursome on the Rancho California golf course near Temecula.

Wright scored his ace on the par-three, 153-yard 12th hole which is surrounded by water and bunkers.

LIGHTHEARTED Larry Ziegler, whos rose from stick boy to the board of directors of the St. Louis Blues hockey team, is back in golf's hirachy, too.

Ziegler has become the 28th qualifier for the prestigious $200,000 MONY (Mutual of New York) Tournament of Champions, which will be played April 24-27 at La Costa Resort Hotel, Spa and Country Club.

The long-hitting Ziegler won the Jacksonville Open to qualify for this exclusive event, for which only winners of major events since the last MONY T of C are eligible.

This will be Larry's second appearance here. He tied for 10th place in 1970.

Nueva organizacion pide esfuerzo contra violencia

Una nueva organizacion de padres Mexico Americano, formada recientamente en Chino, se unio con los jefes de policia del valle, para apelar a los residentes a no dejar a chamacos o' chamacas quinceaneros andar por las calles de los barrios con areas de agitamiento donde los actos de violencia han aumentado.

Llevandalo un paso mas adelante, El Consejal de Accion de la Communidad de Chino, esta apelando a los padres que se unan y juntos traten de buscar soluciones al aumento de violencia tipo ganga que en los ultimos meses ha costado la vida a dos jovenes y ha dejado mas de diez otros seriamente heridos.

Martin Salgado, presidente del grupo que se formo despues de una junta de la communidad el dia diez de Marzo. Salgado dijo, "del unico modo que podemos resolver nuestro problema, es unirnos y trabajar juntos como padres que mos concierne por el bienestar de nuestros ninos y una verdadera amistad."

En publico, una apelacion les fue hecha los padres del barrio la semana pasada. El Jefe de Policia de Chino, Frank Meehan y el Jefe de Policia de Pomona, F.P. Wallick, pidieron que las actividades de Jovenes se observaran con mas cuidado por temor a mas violencia de ganga.

Los jefes de policia pidieron a los padres reportar caravanas de jovenes viajando entre Pomona, Chino, Upland Ontario o Cucamonga, o cualquier otra actividad de jovenes que no sea usual en los barrios.

Los jefes senalaron que reportando esto se podian advertir incidentes posibles de violencia. El Consejal resolvio que si padres in los barrios no se unen y tratan de allar respuestas a poner alto a esta violencia y trajedia, la situacion puede ponerse aun peor.

There'll always be an England

'Linkman' Victor Martin, B.E.M., preserves a way of life

EDITOR'S NOTE — Once linkmen carried torches to light the way for operagoers from carriage to Royal Opera House. Today Victor Martin, head linkman at Covent Garden, shepherds audiences out of the house bar and into the theater before the curtain rises.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — For resonance, dramatic impact and rich rubato phrasing, it's hard to beat Victor Martin, Covent Garden's durable basso profundo.

At La Scala, he might be ensnrined as Vittori Martini, but at the Royal Opera House, where he spends every performance on the audience side of the footlights, he is known to royalty and standees alike as "The Sergeant."

For the past 26 years, Sgt. Martin, B.E.M. — British Empire Medal — has been Covent Garden's head doorman or, by official title, Head Linkman, meaning one who carries a torch.

"It goes back to your days when this theater began," The Sergeant explained as the overture to Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" cascaded across the lobby. "The public had to be protected from footpads and cut-throats by linkmen who led them to and from their carriages with a torch."

Now it is the public which quakes at the benevolent tyranny of the linkman, as they did when The Sergeant inoned con fuoco and fortissimo: "Will you take your seats please, ladies and gentlemen, this is the last bell. Anyone not seated by the rise of the curtain will have to remain outside for 20 minutes until the interval."

Goaded by the booming basso that echoed among the plaster cupids high up in the red velvet paneling, the audience deserted the bars and cloakrooms and hastened to their seats.

Covent Garden has a strict rule against seating anyone after the curtain has risen.

"In Wagner's 'Rheingold,' which we do here without an interval, or as you say, intermission, that means spending the whole evening at the back, which irks some American and Canadian gentlemen who don't know our rules and have paid nine quid $22.50 a seat," Martin said almost con larrymoso — with tears.

Weighing in at twenty stone 280 pounds "equally distributed on either leg," The Sergeant has had to eject only 10 patrons in all his years at the opera house, mostly drunks, gate crashers "and one or two who became what you might call to expressive for the quality of the performance."

A regimental sergeant major in the Grenadier Guards, Martin "got a lump on the head from an angry German at Anzio," but was awarded the British Empire Medal last year by the queen for services at the front of the Royal Opera House.

He has more than a bowing acquaintance with members of the Royal Family, especially Princess Margaret's children who come along to dress rehearsals.

On nights when there is a royal gala or a command performance, The Sergeant sheds his red frock coat in favor of tails, striped pants and an enormous sash while the 17 linkmen on his staff — ushers, ticket takers, cloakroom attendants — are arrayed in peacock blue frockcoats, velvet breeches and silver buckled shoes.

The royal red carpet is rolled out and the queen abandons the nongala royal box "on the prompter or high-numbered side of the house," as Martin terms the right side facing the stage, "to occupy a center box with the Government on her right, the Opposition on her left and the Corps Diplomatique in the stalls above and below. All those adjacent to the queen are in white tie, the rest in black tie."

Martin loves the glitter of a "royal do," but his favorite audience are "the long-haired kids in the blue jeans who pay 10 bob $1.25 to sit on their backsides in the stalls after the seats have been taken out for one of conductor Colin Davis' prom nights. They love every minute of it and you never hear a cough out of them."

Although tone deaf and "absolutely bonkers about Italian opera," he has come to "find some harmony among the discord of the modern composers" and can "tell a good house from a bad house blindfolded" just standing at the foot of the great staircase.

For all of his love opera, The Sergeant never has been called on to carry a spear in "Othello" or swell out a crowd scene as a supernumerary in "Tosca" or "Aida," but he confessed with a crimson blush to once having appeared as the fair Brunhilde in a backstage Christmas spoof of Wagner's "Die Walkure."

Pround for pound, if not note for note, he must have weighed in as Convent Garden's Prima Donna Assoluta of all time.

Rockefeller: a chance to be the most effective Veep

EDITOR'S NOTE — Years ago, Nelson Rockefeller wrote that it was impossible for a vice president to share a president's powers. Now both Rockefeller and Gerald Ford seem to be hoping that Rockefeller was wrong.

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ignoring the glow of the seat belt sign, Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller stood casually amidships as Air Force Two hurtled at full power down the runway for takeoff to Detroit.

To those who scrambled for the comfort and safety of their seats, Rockefeller smiled an indulgent smile. Then he resumed, for those still gathered around, a chatty recap of what had been one of the most tumultuous days in the Senate for any vice president.

There was no particular reason why Rockefeller couldn't have sat down, too — except that, for him, being strapped in is an unnatural act. Yet the past 100 days have witnessed this man, known for years as the consummate take-charge executive, accept constraints without a whimper.

He is finding, to his great delight, he says, that it is not at all that painful. He has often repeated since taking office Dec. 19 that "I'll do whatever the President wants." Now it is becoming increasingly obvious that what Gerald R. Ford wants is for Nelson A. Rockefeller to have the loosest rein and the greatest input of perhaps any vice president in history.

Rockefeller, at no small cost to himself or the President, had excercized that freedom just hours earlier. He had ruled against the once-fearsome coalition of Southern Democrats and conservative Republicans to expedite the liberalization, at long last, of the Senate's filibuster rule, the device by which minority blocs had time and again thwarted majority will. The Senate, it may be presumed, will never be the same. Neither, perhaps, will Rockefeller's — or even Ford's — chances of making peace with the conservative wing of the GOP. For the vice presidents reward was a stream of denunciation from Barry Goldwater, Jesse Helms, Strom Thurmond and other conservatives. Not satisfied with that, a few later trooped down to the White House to complain personally to the President. Ford later did send word that had he been residing over the Senate, he would have handled the matter differently.

"These people," shrugged Rockefeller aboard the plane, "are never going to like me anyway . . . even if I'm not as bad as they think I am. The important thing is that I did what I thought was right, to get it resolved."

In that light, it was not at all odd that Rockefeller's first head-knocking encounter would come in the Senate. For one thing, nowhere is the premium on talk and protocol any higher. For another, presiding over that chamber was the sole clear-cut duty — as provided in the Constitution — with which he began his vice presidential career 100 days ago Saturday March 29.

But, other chores have come, just as Ford promised they would. By far the biggest step was taken on Feb. 13, when, to some dismay on the part of his own staff, the President gave Rockefeller operating control of the Domestic Council, the White House police and planning agency.

Though Ford formally remained council chairman, he emphasized that Rockefeller as vice chairman will have "responsibility for its work." And the President underscored that commitment in several ways. He named Rockefeller's own aides to head the council staff, with one of them, James M. Cannon, to double up as Ford's domestic affairs assistant. Moreover, the chief executive listed new, broad guidelines for the agency which closely resemble the goals of the National Commission for Critical Choices for Americans — an organization Rockefeller founded two years ago.

Rockefeller, who had openly sought the assignment but had been kept in some suspense over it, was plainly delighted. "It's exciting, really exciting," he said. "It's exactly what I want to do, because it puts me in a position to contribute to the solving of problems over the long haul. I mean, the biggest question this country faces is 'Can freedom survive the really revolutionary changes taking place?'"

And, as if he'd left any doubt about the importance he attaches to the council post, Rockefeller added: "Now, when I send the President a memo, I sign it vice chairman of the Domestic Council, not vice president."

Despite the disclaimers, speculation persists that Ford may bow out in 1976, even though he has said that he will be a candidate. Some conservatives believe that Ford, in making that declaration, is merely running interference for Rockefeller by effectively keeping others, like Ronald Reagan, from building early campaigns.

Whatever the case, it is clear that Rockefeller and his lieutenants, including those who now mingle with the White House staff, are trying hard, as one put it, "not to get out front of the President.'

The vice president, in that regard, has been downright obsequious at times. His speeches always are chocked with unbridled praise for Gerald Ford.

In New York, he called the President brilliant and likened him to Winston Churchill. In Detroit, he said he had "never worked with a man more dedicated, more devoted."

Ford, for his part, returns the compliments. "One of the best ideas this Ford ever had was nominating Mr. Rockefeller to be vice president," he declared at their joint appearance in New York. "I hope to share for a very long time your confidence, your counsel and your company."

By all indications, instances of friction between the President's and Rockefeller's offices have been few and minor.

Years ago, Rockefeller himself wrote that it was impossible for a vice president to share the President's powers, to keep a hand of his own on the administration's tiller. For the moment, both obviously are hoping he was wrong. "It is a partnership," said one Ford aide, "that gives Nelson Rockefeller the opportunity to be the most effective vice president ever."

This Week on Wall Street

Mideast news fails to halt market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market withstood the shock wave of some bad news from the Middle East to post a moderate gain this past week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which slid more than 27 points from the opening on Monday to late Tuesday morning, rebounded to wind up the holiday-shortened week with a 7.20 gain at 770.26.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose .46 to 83.85, and the New York Stock Exchange composite edged up .20 to 44.46.

The early selloff, however, left declines ahead of advances for the week, 967 to 745 among the 1,966 issues traded on the NYSE.

The market began the week confronting the news of the breakdown of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's efefforts to mediate a settlement between Egypt and Israel.

That was followed Tuesday morning by the assassination of Saudi Arabia's King Faisal.

The Dow tumbled nearly 20 points on Monday for its worst daily setback in four months, and it dropped another eight in the early going Tuesday before it began to recover.

But it came back quickly late Tuesday and Wednesday as House and Senate conferees settled on a tax cut bill to send to President Ford.

And the market drew some further forward momentum Thursday from the government's report of a record $917 million surplus in the nation's trade balance for February, thanks in part to a dropoff in oil imports.

With the markets closed on Good Friday, Big Board volume for the week totaled 73.19 million shares, compared with 111.88 million the previous week.

The average volume for the four trading days of 18.30 million was the lightest in two months.

"The light volume disturbs me a little," said Larry Wachtel at Bache & Co. "It looks as though the market has become more selective and is showing less conviction than it was."

One factor which apparently contributed to the market's gain was buying by investing institutions putting the final touches on their portfolios for first-quarter reports, which will show their holdings as of this coming Monday's close.

Once that so-called "windowdressing" support is removed, starting on Tuesday, Wachtel observed, the market might well face a strong test of whether it could continue the exuberance it has shown for the first three months of 1975.

Two developments in the immediate future for the market come next Thursday when government figures on wholesale prices for March are due out, and Friday when the March unemployment rate is expected to be reported.

NO TRICK OR TREAT — This "false face" actually is a casting held by an overhead crane at Borg Warner's York, Pa., plant. After machining, it will be part of an industrial air conditioning compressor.

WESTERN STATES are banding together on energy development, according to Colorado's Gov. Richard Lamm. He said western leaders are aware of damage done by strip mining and other energy exploration in the east leaving behind a wasteland. Western states want energy development but don't want a moonscape left behind, Lamm said.

Fly away with me, Lucille, in my hovering airmobile

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — There were days when Ben and Connie Smith despaired their tiny son would live to be six months old.

Baby Chris suffered a horrible skin rash, diarrhea and severe malnutrition because of a hereditary disease—"acrodermatitis enteropathica." At that time, doctors knew of only about 80 cases of the malady, and only a few had survived infancy.

Now Chris—officially Charles Bennett Smith II—is three years old, a happy, radiant youngster who appears never to have been sick a day in his young life.

And his mother's experiences may be turned into a boon for parents who need mother's milk for sick children.

The "miracle" drug that gave him a future is zinc sulfate, a common preparation available in any drugstore.

The real miracle for Chris, however, was the discovery by a London medical researcher that the condition, with its recurring ugly rashes, skin infections and intestinal disruptions, stemmed from a zinc deficiency.

With that revelation, doctors at the University of Colorado Medical Center, who had been studying the disease, ran a series of extensive tests on Chris to confirm the deficiency, then prescribed a dosage of zinc sulfate.

It was the second reprieve for Chris and his parents.

When he was five months old and suffering from the full onset of the symptoms of the disease, doctors prescribed mother's milk on the chance his system was reacting to his regular feeding of cow's milk. Within four days, the symptoms cleared up.

However, the Smith family then faced the difficulty of finding a constant supply of mother's milk, since Connie Smith did not nurse Chris. What little mother's milk was available was almost prohibitively expensive for the Smiths on Ben's modest mechanic's earnings.

One pharmaceutical preparation which seemed to help Chris was withdrawn from the market because of potentially serious side effects, and another drug which was normally prescribed could not be tolerated by Chris' system. It appeared the child would have to take mother's milk for the rest of his life.

Connie Smith issued an appeal through the local news media for mother's milk donors, and the response came from all over the country.

Interest lagged and another appeal through the news media brought a renewed supply, but the Smiths began to wonder what would happen as the years went by.

It was about that time, nearly a year ago, that the report came from London that the rare disease had been tied to a zinc deficiency.

Doctors at the University of Colorado Medical Center contacted the Smiths last October and asked them to bring Chris in for tests. Three weeks of probing confirmed the zinc deficiency and Chris was on his way to a new life, no longer dependent on a tenuous supply of donated mother's milk.

He must be taken to a Phoenix hospital each week for a blood test to measure the zinc level, but otherwise, he leads a normal life.

Not so Connie Smith.

Her experience in trying desperately to keep up the supply of milk for Chris has led her to organize a milk bank for the Phoenix area. She keeps two freezers full of donated milk which she distributes free to anyone who needs it. The project has been a drain on the Smith's finances and her time.

She and several friends have been trying to raise funds to buy equipment to process the milk and store it properly, but have run into a frustrating lack of interest among local hospitals, doctors and medical organizations. About the only support they have gotten is from a local Jaycees chapter.

"Everybody is in favor of establishing a milk bank, but nobody wants to take the responsibility of running it because it would cost about $15,000 a year to operate it right," Mrs. Smith said. She wants the milk to be free to those who need it.

"Just think what it would mean to a family to be able to depend on a free supply of mother's milk if a baby had to have it because of some allergy or disease," Mrs. Smith said.

"I know what it means."

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Florida is in the midst of its best Easter tourist season ever and the people-crush could put 1975 at the top of all previous record tourism years, officials say.

The influx of vacationers forced Walt Disney World to close its gates for four hours for the second day in a row Tuesday. Central Florida motels and hotels staggered to accommodate the visitors.

The Orlando Chamber of Commerce said 28,163 of the area's 28,410 motel and hotel rooms were filled. Employes there were manning a special answering service to direct tourists to the few vacancies.

SANTA MONICA (AP) — Monogram Industries, Inc., said monday that its offer to exchange 10 per cent subordinated debentures for its common stock expired March 21.

The company said tenders were received for approximately 457,000 shares.

Monogram produces electrical insulating materials, industrial fasteners, sanitation equipment and multifamily housing.

PASADENA (AP) — Royal Industries has completed the acquisition of the assets of World Bestos Division of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

World Bestos, located in New Castle, Ind., is a supplier of truck brake lock linings.

Royal is a diversified manufacturer whose principal products serve the automotive replacement, farm and energy markets.

Real estate costs will be itemized

Legislation beneficial to all persons involved in real estate transactions will go into effect next June, said Walter Arnold, president of the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors.

That's when the Real Estate Procedures Act of 1974, signed by President Ford last December, will go into effect. This requires that all settlement or closing costs for a home mortgage be itemized and fully disclosed to buyer and seller not less than 12 days before the loan closes.

Settlement costs include such items as down payment, mortgage, origination fee, title search, examination and insurance, land survey, legal services, services of Realtor, real estate broker and agent, credit reports, appraisals and interest on the mortgage between date of closing and date of the first regular monthly payment.

The new law will assure that all those involved in a real estate transaction know precisely what costs each is expected to pay when the loan is closed, said Arnold.

And that will help eliminate misunderstandings that sometimes have resulted when a buyer and seller meet to close a mortgage loan and are suddenly faced with additional unexpected costs.

If both the buyer and seller agree, however, this disclosure requirement may be waived.

The law applies to conventional mortgages from a lender who has federally insured deposits or a federal charter, as well as to all Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration loans. Under the law, the Department of Housing and Urban Development still has authority to set maximum settlement charges levied in connection with loans insured by the FHA or guaranteed by the VA, he added.

"Another benefit of the law is that it will help standardize all mortgage procedures and paperwork by requiring lenders to provide uniform settlement forms which itemize charges imposed on both borrower and seller. Standardization will help make mortgages more negotiable, which means the flow of mortgage funds from one part of the country to another will be simpler. This can be important in times when mortgage money is tight on one part of the country, but funds are still available elsewhere."

Other provisions of the law prohibit the following: any fees other than those paid for legitimate settlement services "actually performed"; any person from accepting "any fee, kickback or thing of value" related to a real estate settlement business referral; sellers from forcing buyers to purchase title insurance from a specified firm; and lenders from requiring home loan borrowers to make excessive deposits in escrow accounts for property taxes and insurance, said Arnold.

The law also entitles the buyer to know the previous selling price of the house he is purchasing, and requires the lender to provide customers with a booklet which describes the nature and costs of real estate settlement services.

"The National Association of Realtors welcomes the new regulations, many of which they previously had urged Congress to adopt "to reduce home buyers' misunderstandings and confusion (about closing cost procedures) and possibly reduce closing costs themselves," he reported.

San Onofre job helps employment

About 1,000 construction workers are now employed in the expansion of the San Onofre Nuclear Generating Station located just south of San Clemente, reports the Southern California Edison Co.

Workers, who come from various crafts and professions, are involved in constructing the two additional 1,100,000 kilowatt nuclear generating units at the coastal site.

The largest weekly payroll since construction began was recorded the second week of March and totaled approximately $360,000.

Building crafts presently represented at the site include boilermakers, carpenters, cement masons, electricians, ironworkers, operating engineers, painters, laborers, pipefitters and teamsters. In addition, there are engineers, technicians, draftsmen and clerical employees assigned to the location.

A company spkesman said peak employment is expected to peak at more than 2,400 workers during the next two years.

Actual construction of support buildings and foundations for the nuclear units is now underway at San Onofre. The two nuclear generating units are being constructed by Edison and San Diego Gas and Electric Co. at a cost in excess of $2 billion.

Home foreclosures still low despite economic conditions

Despite the present adverse economic conditions, the number of mortgages in foreclosure is only one-half of one per cent of all outstanding mortgages, said Rex J. Morthland, chairman of the American Bankers Association's governing council.

Testifying before the U.S. Senate's Subcommittee on Housing and Urban Affairs, he reported that banks and other lenders usually do their best to readjust payments or take some other action to avoid foreclosures.

The current foreclosure rate does represent a small increase over the third quarter of 1974 but added that it had been as high or slightly higher at the end of the first quarter of 1972, 1973 and 1974.

The ABA, which represents nearly 97 per cent of the nation's 14,000 banks, is supporting various legislation to provide emergency housing support, financial support to homeowners, and stimulate the resale of presently owned homes.

Morthland also told the subcommittee the ABA members favors the immediate enactment of a temporary, emergency program to stimulate the construction and purchase of homes."

He said that potential dangers to the national economy from such a program could be protected against if several short-range and long-range guidelines were followed. He suggested structuring the program for maximum impact in the shortest time possible, assisting only those families who really need assistance and automatic termination when economic conditions improve.

Morthland also said that condominium townhouses, condominium apartments and co-op single units should be included in any emergency housing legislation.

Small home design includes some larger house features

By HIAWTHA ESTES

This house is a result of our receiving many requests to design some larger two bedroom homes that include the same features that are usually included in larger, more luxurious three and four bedroom homes.

From the garage, a door opens to a roofed front porch which leads to the entrance. From the entry, there is splendid circulation to every room in the house.

The living room with its wide fireplace, has a view towards the street and sliding doors open to the patio. Similar doors are in the family room. Such doors bring sunshine, fresh air, an ever changing view and are a constant invitation to outdoor activities.

The family room is accessable from the hall, kitchen and living room. A partial wall separates it from the kitchen.

Washers and dryers are so beautifully designed today that there is no need to hide them in a separate room. This is why we have placed them at one end of the kitchen, next to the bath plumbing. This allows us to include a kitchen in this home which is over 22 feet in length. This extra length includes a much larger than usual kitchen nook.

The master bedroom suite would be considered sumptuous in a home twice this size. In addition to the large bedroom, there is a dressing area which features three wardrobes and a dressing table. A private bath with a semi-private water closet compartment and twin pullman lavatory complete the suite.

The low, ground-hugging lines of the home are pleasingly emphasized by the interesting use of stone and wood. Especially note the alternate use of wood siding and stone veneer panels on the front wall of the bedroom.

This same basic exterior is also available in both a three and four bedroom plan, at a different price structure. Xerox copies of these designs will be forwarded for 50 cents. Stamps are acceptable for payment.

Complete working drawings for plan 21018 can be purchased for only $12.67 for the first set and $7.42 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until June 25, 1975. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A specification booklet is available for $1.06. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $1.06. The following home plan books are also available: Distinctive Homes—$1.59; Prize Homes—$1.59; Hallmark Homes—$1.59; Town & Country Homes—$1.59; Homes by Hiawatha—$1.59; Ranch — Modern Ranch & Modern Homes $2.39. All six books—a $10.34 value—for only $8.22. Orders for less than three books, please add an extra 20 cents per book for postage and handling. Prices include sales tax. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-PO, Northridge, California 91324.

Colorado Springs turns to sun

Colorado Springs, Colo., may be the only community nationally that has no worries about natural gas shortages and zooming costs.

That's because it can look to the time when its more than 135,000 residents will be using only a fraction of the natural gas they currently are using.

The National Association of Realtors has learned the city will begin its conversion to solar energy for heating and air conditioning late this year.

Colorado Springs Mayor Andrew Marshall said the city virtually has been forced to make this move. "Late in 1973, we were told by our natural gas supplier that he could allow the city only 7,000 more permits, could not increase the peak load amounts required and had only an 11-year reserve on hand.

"We argued with him for some time, telling him and the community that this meant we would have to curtail business and residential growth. Soon, though, we stopped arguing and decided to find out what we could do about the problem," the mayor said.

The result was formation by the city and community leaders of a non-profit corporation, headed by Douglas Jardine, that would test and report on the feasibility of solar energy for heating and air conditioning.

With federal assistance, the corporation built a prototype home for that testing. Results reported by metering equipment and the family living in the home have been so positive that the city now is planning:

— Construction of a solar energy collecting and storage plant. It would heat and provide air conditioning to 78 homes in an urban renewal area of the city. This phase, Jardine says, should be completed by the end of 1975.

— A voluntary changeover to solar energy that would be offered the entire city. Necessary equipment could be purchased outright or leased for a monthly fee. Jardine feels this could be completed in less than 10 years.

— Possible development of another plant that would produce electricity from solar energy. It would allow for total conversion of a home's electrical system to solar power. (The city owns all its utilities.)

This approach is not now economically feasible. However, a private citizen already has donated a five-acre tract for the plant.

What would equipment for solar heating and air conditioning cost? "It probably would be 10 per cent of the cost of a new home, and about $6,000 for conversion of existing homes of 2,500 square feet," Jardine estimated.

What about operating costs? "Our calculations show that it would save the homeowner in Colorado Springs about 90 per cent of current heating and air conditioning costs," Mayor Marshall said.

Jardine added that solar heat energy for the prototype home costs about 25 cents per million BTUs, while natural gas in the city costs $1.49 and electric heating about $6.50 per million BTUs.

"And the outlook here regarding natural gas costs, for example, is that they will rise at a rate of about 40 per cent per year for the next several years," he said.

The solar energy system in the prototype home is similar to ones currently in use in other sections of the nation.

Equipment is installed on the roof of a home or other building. It collects the sun's heat, which, in turn heats a fluid in a closed-circuit system.

The fluid heats water which is drawn through coils in a duct system. Air is blown over the coils to heat the structure. Electricity needed: Enough to operate two pumps and a fan, a cost of less than $20 per year.

Heat also is stored for future needs. Jardine said that enough was stored at the corporation's test home to provide heat for 17 days without any additional collecting. He also noted that limited collecting can be accomplished on partly cloudy and even cloudy days.

There are other systems in use nationally — and even in Colorado Springs. One other solar heated home there uses a "waterfall" system.

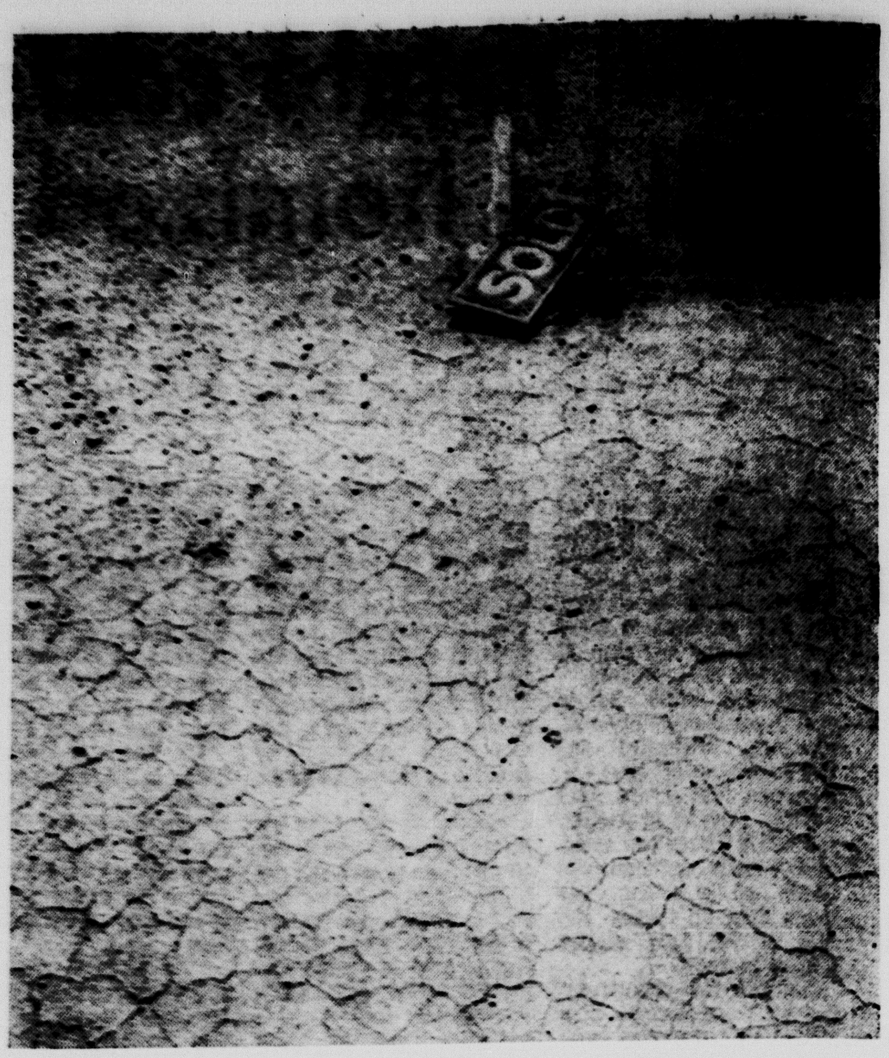
Water is pumped to the roof from a storage tank in the basement and flows onto aluminum panels, finally returning to the tank to be recirculated. Rocks surrounding the tank are heated and air is blown across them to heat the house.

This system is less expensive to install, but more expensive to operate, the designer of the home, Peter Wood of Energy Conservation System, indicated. He also noted that the waterfall method provides 70 per cent to 80 per cent of the home's heating needs. Jardine says that his prototype home provides virtually 100 per cent of the heating needs.

Although economic benefits to residents are important, city officials also view conversion to solar energy use from another perspective: the need for growth and continued prosperity.

That need also has been seen by the Colorado legislature. In its last session, it passed a bill that reduced the rate of assessment for solar equipment from 30 per cent to 5 per cent.

In Colorado Springs and the state of Colorado, the future apparently is as bright as the sun.



TOOK US FOR A RIDE — Merrill J. Wright of Rock Port, Mo., is upset about a lot he bought near Phoenix, Ariz. for $3,500. Several Arizona land developments are now being investigated for alleged fraudulent sales.

THE SAGE — This drawing depicts one of the home designs at the Daybreak Homes project in Upland. The homes, built by Crowell-Leventhal, Inc., are priced from $40,950 to $46,950.

Daybreak buyers can decorate own houses

Buyers of homes at the Daybreak Homes development in Upland can decorate the interiors to match their individual tastes while leaving the outside yard work to the professional gardeners.

The homes, built by Crowell-Leventhal, Inc., include front yard landscaping and sprinkler systems, said Joyce Anderson of Walker and Lee, sales agent.

In addition, many large established citrus trees have been preserved for the enjoyment of the homeowners.

Buyers have six floorplans from which to choose. These include one and two story homes with three, four and five bedrooms.

All have early living floorplans and are situated on private, tree-lined lots up to one-fourth acre in size, she added.

The homes are located near shopping centers and schools.

These are priced from $40,950 to $46,950, with 7¼% per cent interest rates or VA and F.H.A. financing. Conventional loans are also available.

To reach the homes, persons may go north on Mountain Avenue to 15th Street, and travel east to Shamrock Avenue. The office is located at 1595 Shamrock Avenue. The telephone number is 982-6178.

Ex-Marine given prison sentence for slaying

RIVERSIDE (AP) — A former Marine sergeant has been sentenced to 31 years-to-life in prison for the murder of a Riverside County deputy sheriff in nearby Rancho California last July.

Michael Williams, 25, was sentenced Tuesday in Superior Court after earlier pleading guilty to second degree murder as well as to two counts of kidnaping his two children.

Williams was arrested last July 31 for killing Edward Schrader, 26, who had responded to a domestic quarrel in the apartment of Williams' estranged wife.

'We care' firm goes into redevelopment

The slogan for an urban redevelopment project in Kansas City, Mo., is "When You Care Enough to Build the Very Best."

The developer is the Hallmark Cards, Inc., a name not associated with real estate. But the greeting card company — which created the "care enough" phrase — has made a major commitment to revitalizing the core of Kansas City, its home town.

The project, called Crown Center, is one of the nation's largest urban redevelopment jobs completely financed by private capital.

The 50-building business and residential community will cost more than $250 million when completed in 1985. About a third of the project is now done.

This new in-town community will have more than two million square feet of office space, 2,240 apartments, a 730-room hotel, a bank, two retail complexes, a 36-acre central square, an audio-visual communications center, cultural and entertainment facilities and underground parking for more than 7,000 vehicles.

It is designed to accommodate a daytime population of 50,000 persons, including 4,000 permanent residents.

In operation now are five office buildings, the hotel, bank, a retail complex, communications center, the central square and about half of the underground parking.

The first apartments will be ready for occupancy next year.

Hallmark is convinced that it is possible to reverse the exodus to the suburbs that began after World War II.

"If you give the people an address they can be proud of, they'll return to the inner city," said Donald J. Hall, president of Hallmark Cards.

Lewis Homes:

Buyers' market makes homes a good bargain

Persons wanting their own homes should buy now while there is a "buyers' market," said Richard Lewis, president of Lewis Homes.

"People shouldn't be lulled into thinking that conditions now in the home seeker's favor will be of long duration," he added.

"Prices on new homes, determined mainly by the builder's cost for land and building materials have remained firm and in a few instances such items as lumber and copper have dropped a little."

And because of last fall's slowdown in home sales, buyers now have a larger selection from which to choose, said Lewis.

"Virtually all economic forecasts indicate the current buyers' market will continue for only another two or three months. As the nation's economy begins its expected upturn this spring — accompanied by further inflation, higher building costs and costlier financing — higher purchase prices may be anticipated."

The person who buys now will see his purchase prove itself as a hedge against inflation very shortly, he predicted.

He cited as an example of a buyers' market the Countryside development in Chino, which celebrated the grand opening of its third unit.

Site of The Countryside is Schaefer Avenue, a block east of Pipe Line Avenue, in the west section of Chino. The new unit opened with a price schedule of $39,800 to $45,550 for its one and two-story designs which measure up to 2,-191 square feet of living area.

The location alone, with land sites being bid for by builders of status-type homes, is bound to force construction prices, costs and purchase prices upward on any further homes built in that area," Lewis predicted.

Selection of stylings at The Countryside is made from models with three or four-bedrooms and two or 2½ baths.

Financing is offered at as little as 7¾ per cent interest, another inducement drawing buyers, Lewis noted.

The development is reached from the San Bernardino Freeway or Pomona Freeway by turning south on Corona Freeway to Schaefer Avenue in Chino, then east one mile to the model homes.

Senior citizens are urged to apply for federal rent funds

Some $90 million in federal rent subsidies will be made available to low-income renters in California this year under a new section of the Housing and Community Development Act.

And the California Office on Aging wants elderly renters to know about the new aid and apply for it.

"Local public housing authorities are going to apply for community shares of the subsidy money and we urge seniors and organizations of seniors to start making their needs known for this rental assistance," said Stan Nielsen, acting director of the office on aging.

"Great numbers of our older people need desperately to keep a decent roof over their heads without using up most of their food money to do it."

A housing assistance payments program was signed into law by President Ford earlier this year as an addition to the Housing Act. This authorizes rent subsidies for low income households in order to prevent their having to spend too much of their income for rent.

For an elderly retired couple or elderly single person, rent should not be more than 25 per cent of their gross income if their income level is 80 per cent or less of the median family income in their residential area.

The new program requires that at least 30 per cent of all subsidized leased housing be reversed for families or households with an income 50 per cent or less than the median income in their area. Public Housing Authorities have federal data on median income levels.

Nielsen acknowledged that while the new rent subsidy program is intended to alleviate the low-income problems of all levels, "we are frankly very apprehensive that many deserving senior citizens could be overlooked."

"That's why we are urging elderly renters to find out about local Housing Authority plans. All we want for them, and all they want for themselves, is a fair shake," he concluded.

Three women presented awards for valley real estate sales

Three women have received awards from the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors multiple listing service for real estate sales and listings during February.

She and her husband, John, have three children, two of which are married.

Mrs. Knight is with the Booth-Beamon Realty firm in Pomona. She has been involved in real estate for 15 years.

Mrs. Knight is active in the Pomona Central Business District and has served on YMCA membership drives.

Mrs. Burdick has been associated with the Rosa Schwartz Realty Co. in Claremont for three years and recently received her broker's license from Citrus College.

The conferences, entitled "How to List and Sell Mobile Homes," will begin at 8:45 a.m. each day. The registration fee is $30 which covers the cost of instruction, new book and all materials.

For more information, persons may contact the Educational Department, California Association of Realtors, 505 Shatto Place, Los Angeles, Calif. 90020.

Ten specialists who work in various aspects of the development and operation of commercial real estate will appear as guest speakers in a new UCLA Extension program which starts April 1 on the Westwood campus.

The theme is "Shopping Centers 1975," with the sessions covering topics such as leasing and leases, management and promotion, financing site developments and layouts, tenant needs, expansion plans, and elements that spell success in retail commercial real estate.

Series coordinators are Alan A. Herd, Realtor, and Steven L. Soboroff, real estate broker.

The cost for the five Tuesday night sessions is $50. For more information, persons may write to Management, Labor and Business, UCLA Extension, P.O. Box 24902, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024, or phone (213) 825-7031.

Businessmen who relate to the volume of housing starts may now subscribe to an econometric housing forecasting service which predicts starts for each of the 50 states.

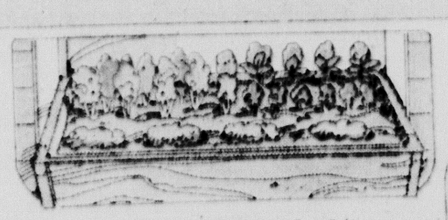
BUGS BUNNY by Stoffel & Heimdahl

GOOD VALUE IDEAS FROM WRIGLEY'S GUM

A garden is great family fun and a good way to cut food costs. And you don't need a green thumb to get results!

An 8 x 10 ft. plot is plenty big for the vegetables shown below (about $4.00 in seeds) and can produce up to $100 worth of vegetables.

HINT: Plant seeds outdoors only after frost-free date.



For apartments, a 2 x 3 ft. window box, a couple of big pots and about $2.75 in seeds may bring up to $25 worth of vegetables.

Plant cucumbers and tomatoes in individual pots.

Another good value idea: Wrigley's 10 Pak is a real family size bargain. Ten packs of finest quality gum at a money-saving price.

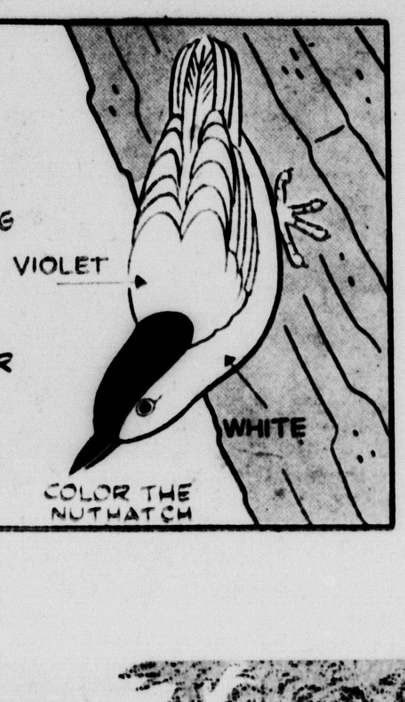
NUTHATCHES

THE BUSY LITTLE NUTHATCH GETS ITS NAME FROM ITS HABIT OF WEDGING SEEDS AND NUTS INTO CRACKS AND HACKING (HATCHING) THEM OPEN WITH ITS BILL. IT CLIMBS WITH EQUAL EASE WHETHER IT IS CLIMBING UP THE TREE OR CREEPING DOWNWARD, HEAD-FIRST, IN ITS TOPSY-TURVY SEARCH FOR FOOD



THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

TAMMY ALLEN OF SHELBURNE, VT, ASKS:
"WHY DO WE SAY BLESS YOU WHEN WE SNEEZE ?"

SNEEZING HAS LONG BEEN REGARDED AS AN OMEN OF SOME KIND. SOME PEOPLE BELIEVE THAT, IN A SNEEZE, A SPIRIT LEAVES THE BODY. OTHERS CONSIDER IT AN OMEN OF BAD LUCK. TO TURN SNEEZES INTO GOOD OMENS, PEOPLE SOMETIMES SAY A BLESSING AFTER A SNEEZE. ENGLISH-SPEAKING PEOPLE SAY "GOD BLESS YOU" WHEN SOMEONE SNEEZES. GERMANS SAY "GESUNDHEIT" (YOUR HEALTH). SNEEZES, OF COURSE, ARE CAUSED WHEN SOMETHING GETS INTO THE NOSE THAT DOESN'T BELONG THERE. THE IRRITATION MAY BE DUE TO A COLD, OR TO BREATHING IN DUST OR POLLEN.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — I use a plastic drinking glass for a cookie or biscuit cutter. A slight depression made on the glass releases the cut dough. — MRS. L.W.

DEAR POLLY — To keep the smell of smoke out of my hair I spray a little perfume or cologne on a clean brush. The smell of smoke vanishes and, eventually, the perfume odor fades. — BETH.

Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, ... this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — I cut a 1-inch-thick piece of foam to fit in my mop head so as to keep the wire frame from wearing through the mop and scratching the floors. The mop also wears longer. — MILDRED.

DEAR POLLY — My 18-month-old grandson often needs several baths a day. To save water, time and money my daughter bathes him in a small plastic tub such as used for an infant. — LAURA.

DEAR POLLY — I find the following Pointer most helpful: When measuring shortening for pies, cookies, cakes, etc., I put each teaspoon or tablespoon lined-up along the rim of the bowl. If I am interrupted, I know exactly how much has already been measured. — L.M.

DEAR POLLY — When baby is ready for junior foods and you still have jars of strained food on hand, put some cooked macaroni in the blender, chop into small pieces and add to the strained food until the desired texture is reached. Nothing wasted. — MRS. M.F.

DEAR POLLY — We save leftover bread crumbs and scraps. We crumble them very finely and feed to our fish. No leftovers wasted and a saving on fish food. — DEE.

DEAR POLLY — Those little two-prong wire holders used to hold corn-on-the-cob make excellent pitters for fresh cherries. — MRS. N.F. Jr.

DEAR POLLY — After buying a new dress the washing or cleaning label may be misplaced, so I save a sliver from an inside seam and staple these instructions to the sample and then to the dress hanger. On the back of the label or a second slip of paper I write which accessories I will be wearing with the dress. — MRS. B.W.

DEAR POLLY — Even with all the tips I knew to prevent it, I always seemed to have lumpy gravy till I started pouring it in the blender and now I have the best gravy ever. — JOAN.

'CHAMPIONSHIP TIME'

One of the few times in the past decade UCLA entered the National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball playoffs NOT in first place. As this goes to print, UCLA "Wooden" men are listed by the nation's wire services in 2nd place and Indiana's Hoosiers in the top spot. Monday (March 31), either those two quintets . . . Indiana and UCLA . . . or perhaps two others in the NCAA playoffs, which NBC began televising March 15, will play in the finals at San Diego for the crown. KNBC in Los Angeles and the rest of NBC's Pacific coast stations will carry the finals "live" from 6:00 to 8:00PM. The NCAA expanded its tournament field from 25 to 32 teams this year, adding second-place squads from seven conferences. As a result, going into the playoffs were . . . in addition to the Hoosiers and Bruins . . . Kentucky, Marquette, Alabama, Arizona State, Big Ten runner up Michigan, North Carolina, Maryland and Louisville. NBC Sports Vice President Carl Lindemann Jr. and Executive Director Walter Byers of the NCAA contracted for NBC's exclusive rights to the 1976, as well as 1975, NCAA championship basketball tournament.

'THE RUNAWAYS'

Young Josh Albee (pictured), Dorothy McGuire, Van Williams, John Randolph and Neva Patterson star in an adventure drama about a boy and a leopard whose separate flights to freedom bring them together in a unique friendship, in "The Runaways," a 90-minute CBS Special, Tuesday at 8:30PM.

Teenager Johnny Miles (Albee) runs away from his foster home after he is wrongly accused of theft. Meanwhile, Yarra, a young leopard, escapes from a wild-animal compound when a lightning storm destroys a fence. Friendless and threatened with capture, the two fugitives cross paths through a series of related events, and their mutual need creates a strong bond between them.

COVER CLOSE-UP

'TOGETHERNESS AT THE BALTIMORE'

Uproarious comedy is blended with poignant moments in Hot L Baltimore, Norman Lear's newest series based on the award-winning stage play. The ABC series airs Fridays (9-9:30PM). According to Lear, "the series tells the stories of several disparate characters, who, while not blood relatives, are tied together as part of the Family of Man."

Stories revolve around the people living in, working in and passing through the Hotel Baltimore and evolve from the trials, tribulations and inter-relationships of the characters. The characters are a reflection of their surroundings, which is a once-elegant haven in a formerly bustling neighborhood that has deteriorated with the decline in the area's activities. The flickering "E" in the hotel's marquee bespeaks the hotel's present condition and gives the series its unusual title.

Reprising the role she created on the off-Broadway stage—and which was written for her by playwright Lanford Wilson—is the award-winning actress Conchata Ferrell as April Green. Also starring are James Cromwell as desk clerk Bill Lewis, Al Freeman, Jr. as sidewalk philosopher Charles Bingham, Richard Masur as hotel manager Clifford Ainsley, Jeannie Linero as the free-spirited Colombian ball of fire Suzy Marta Rocket, Stan Gottlieb as crotchety septuagenarian Mr. Morse, Robin Wilson as young and vulnerable Jackie, Gloria Le Roy as idealistic retired waitress Millie, Lee Bergere and Henry Calvert as aging, inseparable companions George and Gordon, and Charlotte Rae as Mrs. Bellotti, over-indulgent mother of hotel resident Moose Bellotti, the never-yet-seen 26-year-old prankster in diapers.

All the hotel people, most of them rejected from or having rejected normal family life for various reasons, are secure in their togetherness, thanks to Mr. Ainsley. As long as he's in charge of his wealthy mother's real estate holdings, the Hotel Baltimore will remain. And among those who call it home there is a deep sense of caring for each other.

Creating the Hot L Baltimore set as a home for these 12 colorful characters has been a labor of love for art directors Edward Stephenson and Archie Sharp. Noted Stephenson, "Hot L Baltimore, as we see it, was built in the early 1900s and has been through the vissisitudes of time and travail. It was redecorated in the late 20s in art deco—papered with gold, green marble and bronze balustrades in the lobby with its capitals and cornices of bronze or wood. "We both tried to make it very architectural rather than simply atmospheric to contrast with the people. This gives a strong environment to contain these various people."

Stephenson has won three Emmy Awards for designing the first "Fred Astaire Special," for producing the Andy Williams Show and as art director and associate producer on the Bob Newhart Show. He worked on variety musicals and "lots of specials" for years prior to doing sets for Sanford and Son, Maude, and Good Times. He also worked on the feature film, "Cold Turkey" and several others.

Sharp was nominated for a Los Angeles Critics Circle Theatrical award for his work on the stage play, "The Hotel Baltimore" (on which the series is based) in 1973 at the Mark Taper Forum of the Los Angeles Music Center where he also functioned as art director for opera productions. In television, his credits include "The Missiles of October" on ABC, the Hallmark Playhouse production, "Love, Love, Love," a Peggy Fleming special filmed in Europe and a Phyllis Diller special. Both Stephenson and Sharp stressed that not one item for the Hot L Baltimore sets had come from a studio prop shop. "We both haunted swap meets, answered ads in the newspaper for chandeliers and period wallpaper. In fact, we chased down every piece," said Stephenson.

The two art directors found the upholstered pieces in zig zag design, prominently displayed in the hotel lobby, in a Hollywood barbershop where they had been used since the '20s. "And we found the antique switchboard for the lobby in a junk yard," said Sharp. The stair railing for the Hot L Baltimore lobby set proved the most difficult piece of decor because it had to be specially made. "It is very heavy and was hard to make," said Sharp. "It is a forged iron reproduction of a Louis Sullivan and he was a leading architect in Chicago at the turn of the century."

Their efforts have been worth it. Norman Lear and series executive producer Rod Parker think of the magnificent set as an added "star" of Hot L Baltimore.

'THINGS THAT SCARE US'

Dick Van Dyke and his daughter, Stacy, who makes her television debut, sing and dance together on the Emmy Award-winning actor-comedian's Special.

Everyone knows who Dick Van Dyke is, and most people know something about him. TV and movie fans know he starred in two television series and a host of very entertaining features, including "Mary Poppins," "Bye Bye Birdie" and "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang." Fans know he married his high school sweetheart, Marjorie, and that they have two sons, two daughters and one granddaughter. Last year, Dick was nominated for an Emmy after giving a superb performance in an ABC-TV Movie of the Week, "The Morning After" in which he played a nice, middle class guy dying of alcoholism. We know that Dick himself is a recovered alcoholic because he wanted it known in hopes that others in the grips of booze might be inspired to come out of the darkness and seek help. Many have. So, one wonders, what's with "The Confessions of Dick Van Dyke," his first ABC Special airing Thursday at 8PM! What's to confess?

"A lot of stuff," replies Dick, "mostly silly fears. I thought it would be kind of fun to share some of my personal phobias because they're all sort of commonplace. Everyone remembers things that scared the heck out of them when they were kids. Werewolf movies terrified me. I was afraid of girls. Most adults get fearful fantasies about their health. A lot of guys are a little afraid of mechanics because they make us feel dumb and charge us for it. These are the kind of fears I confess to on the show. They're not exactly sensational, but we hope they'll provide a few laughs."

Dick says the show opens with one of the toughest song and dance numbers he has ever done. "The song is 'Walking Happy' and six guys and I do the walks of a whole gang of familiar figures. It's wild. The darned thing almost killed me because we taped it in one continuous 'take' and it runs over five minutes." Michele Lee guest stars and Stacy Van Dyke, Dick's pretty 20 year old daughter, makes her professional debut, singing two songs with her dad ("It's a Lovely Day Today" and "Mockingbird").

"I've been watching Stacy perform in school plays for years," explains Dick, "but I never realized how good she was until we worked together in a benefit in Phoenix last year. She was working on the switchboard at a big automobile agency when I called to tell her I wanted her on the show. She almost blew it by putting me on HOLD for about three minutes. Now she's back in school studying drama, dance and voice, thank God.

"She was lousy on the switchboard."

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR KATHRYN CROSBY

Is there a generation gap in your home?—B. Greenley, Van Nuys, Calif.

● No. Our children are as comfortable with older people as youngsters. Teenagers who can't communicate that way were never taught how. And, no doubt, their parents had the same problem. Bing's mother died at 92, and when our children spoke to her, they were on the same wavelength. What's more important is that I love them a lot. I don't want to be "popular" or be buddies with them. All I want is to make them good citizens and fine human beings. I listen to them, care for them, let them make mistakes and don't pounce on them like a ton of bricks when they do. And they know this—which is what counts.

FOR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

You came out of the "$64,000 Question" very well. What do you think you'd be doing if it hadn't been for your appearance on the show?—D. R. Morrison, Waco, Texas

● The quiz show was fun and I'd do it again, but it really didn't have any effect on my life. It got my husband, Dr. Milton Brothers, to Park Avenue two years faster than he would have otherwise. But I'd still be where I am even if I had never appeared on the show.

FOR KAY BALLARD

Have you ever opened your mouth and put your foot in it? —S. R., Wenatchee, Wash.

● And how! Years ago, I did a command performance for King George VI and Queen Elizabeth. When I was introduced to the young Princess Margaret, I pinched her on the cheek and said—with complete lack of class, imagination and protocol—"I'm nuts about your mom and dad and sister." She smiled and said, "They like you too."

FOR DON RICKLES, comedian

Doesn't your abrasive image ever worry you?—David Allen, Atlantic City, N.J.

● Sure I worry. But when I get down, I remind myself that this image made me. I do hope that before I'm in my coffin people will realize that it is only a character I've created.

FOR RONA JAFFE, author of "Family Secrets"

Do you stick to any special routine when you write?—S.S., Las Vegas, Nev.

● I call my books my "babies." That's because for me, writing a book is like having a baby. When I work, I don't leave the house for nine months. As no one sees me, I don't care what I look like—so I eat, and by the time the book's finished, I've gained 20 pounds. But as soon as I "deliver" to my publisher, the weight miraculously slips right off—and I'm back to my normal size again.

FOR DR. BENJAMIN SPOCK

Are you distressed that the younger generation doesn't want children?—J.M., Utica, N.Y.

● Not at all. I think it's marvelous that people who don't want children aren't having them.

FOR JIM HARTZ of the "Today" show

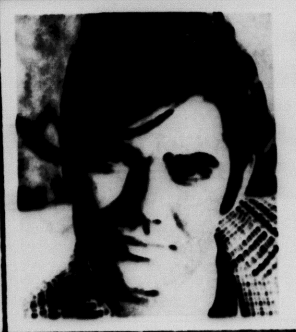
It's been reported that Bill Moyers and Tom Brokaw turned down your job because they felt doing commercials would hurt their stature as journalists. How do you feel?—Leo L. Smith, Chicago, Ill.

● Frank McGee did commercials and it didn't hurt him. Barbara Walters does commercials and it hasn't hurt her. I don't think my position will suffer.

FOR LORNA LUFT

Was going into show business your idea or your mother's? —M.L., Los Angeles, Calif.

● Mine. When I was 14 I told Mom. She wasn't thrilled. She remembered what she went through as a child and didn't want that to happen to me. But when she saw she was talking to a brick wall, she backed me all the way. I was born with a voice, but didn't know what to do with it (I either sang flat or sharp, and so did Liza), so Mom sent us to school.



FOR REX REED

I want to be a movie reviewer. How did you get your start? —J.L., Bangor, Maine

● I grew up in a deprived Southern area where, apart from movies, there wasn't much else to do. Movies were the only thing I knew anything about. At LSU, I reviewed for the campus paper. That's where my career "blossomed." After two reviews, however, I was banned from the theater. I began battling with studios, editors and stars—and have been in trouble ever since.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

My evening was ruined when I went out and met someone wearing my dress. Does this happen to famous people? —M. Janus, Nyack, N.Y.

● Certainly! At President Ford's recent dinner for England's Prime Minister Harold Wilson, Nancy Kissinger and Mrs. Cornelius V. Whitney wore the same Oscar de la Renta dress. Anne Meara's attitude? "I'd love to meet anyone with my dress sense!" Dr. Joyce Brothers analyzes: "Years ago, women got satisfaction from clothes. Nowadays clothes are secondary. Women similarly attired should congratulate each other on their good taste and laugh it off." Couturier Lew Prince of Aldrich agrees: "My clients never show up like twins, but if they did, I'd be thrilled the style was so popular." Designer Fontayne says this never happens to her customers: "All my clothes are 'one of a kind.' The style may be the same, but the fabrics are different."

For Easter:
Anita Bryant's Painful Progress Toward God

By Alan Ebert

Anita Bryant has always been regarded as an oddity by those who watched her stare into the face of superstardom, then turn and walk away without a backward glance. How could she, at the height of her recording success, answer an emphatic "No!" to the extravagant money offered by nightclubs? Few could understand why Anita Bryant truly felt the money was meaningless when measured against the values she shared with her husband and manager, Bob Green.

Neither Anita nor her husband smoked, drank or gambled, and the atmosphere in nightclubs conflicted with many of their religious beliefs. And so did the environments of New York and Los Angeles, which the Greens left so they could live in Miami Beach, the city where Green had been a well-known radio personality.

In retrospect, one could borrow that title of the Sinatra song and say Anita Bryant did it "my way." She doesn't agree, however. "It was not my way but that of God. Left to my own devices, my selfish needs would have wrecked my marriage and family. I have always been the ambitious one—not Bob, as many who know us think. Since the age of eight, when I first dedicated my life to Jesus Christ, I also became dedicated to reaching stardom. Over the years, those two dedications frequently came into conflict. You see, since high school, I have always known I could be a Broadway star. But I learned the hard way that Broadway was my ambition, not God's."

"The hard way" took her to stock companies throughout the U.S., where she found all her energies absorbed by the roles she was playing. "Nothing was left over for Bob and the children. Even when I was with them, I'd be detached. Bob resented this, and rightfully so. There were numerous arguments, and suddenly a divorce loomed as large as my name in lights on Broadway. A choice had to be made—marriage or Broadway stardom.

"I am not a simple person, although it is thought by many that I am," says Anita. "To have reached this time in my life where joy is often overwhelming is the result of having worked through years of conflict. It will surprise the many who think of me as one-dimensional to learn my life has not been spent in the warmth of the Florida Sunshine Tree. I've known my depressions and doubts, caused by the many sides of me coming into conflict. I've known pain, anguish even, in the near death of me, my twins, my marriage and—my faith."

Ray Fisher

"Since high school, I have always known I could be a Broadway star. But I learned the hard way that Broadway was my ambition, not God's."

When Anita Bryant is troubled, she turns to prayer. "I see now that God had brought me to a place where I could go forward but not back. A decision had to be made. And for those who think me a simple person, let me admit my decision did not come easily. I agonized over it! It was so hard to give up my ambitions when I was so close to realizing them." But through prayer, she explains, it was revealed to her the price she would pay for her dream. "Although I am many people, I am primarily a home person, a wife and mother. In discovering this, God lifted that ambition from me. I accepted His will, and by doing so, being Mrs. Bob Green and the mother of my children became the most important aspect of my life. Almost immediately thereafter, happily, but not strangely if one believes in the way God works, I became spokeswoman for a TV ad campaign and that gave me a nationwide recognition I might never have attained even as a Broadway star. As I look, I see many such examples of how God often said no to my selfish needs, as He had plans of His own for my life."

Her motherhood she sees as part of God's plan too. Today, Anita has four children—Bobbie, 12; Gloria, 11; and the twins, Billy and Barbara, age six. Now she sits by her swimming pool, and the sun as it sets over Biscayne Bay illuminates her face. She is even more beautiful at 35 than she was at 20, when she was a runner-up in the Miss America Pageant and the bride of Bob Green, and Anita Bryant watches her children at play. "They could never

What Anita Bryant Believes

Anita Bryant is aware that many who hear and witness her religious fervor, her devout, even passionate belief in God, think of her as a fanatic or a religious nut. "It bothered me once. No more. Then, I wanted to please both sides of the fence, the believers and the nonbelievers. Today, my main concern is to be in the will of God. I know who He is and I know who I am. Many of my religious beliefs are unpopular today, particularly with those who are seeking fulfillment as women. In our home, in my life, my husband is the spiritual leader. That is how God ordained it. He instituted the family unit and He placed the husband at its head with the wife as his helpmate. It is clearly written in Ephesians 5:22-24:

'Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord.
For the husband is head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the savior of the body.
Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing.' "

She takes strong issue with those who insist that one must give to oneself before one can give to another. "No, that is wrong," she says with quiet firmness. "Reaching out and giving to others always results in the giver receiving. But it must begin with each of us giving first. In any relationship, be it marriage or friendship, we must give to our loved ones before we give to ourselves. The love we give out is never lost. It always comes back tenfold."

Thinking back to the woman she once was, she states, "Too much sense of self leads to isolation from others and from God. It creates a terrible loneliness. According to Billy Graham, loneliness is the greatest illness suffered by Americans. And it is an illness that can be so easily cured. We have lost the ability to give, to share. We must find it, recognizing as we search that the most important thing we have to give, to share, is ourselves. I know those who think me 'simple' will find my solution an oversimplification, but honestly, I think what we all need in this country is some good old-fashioned praying."

YOUR NERVES CAN CURE THEMSELVES

once you learn how to de-sensitize them, this doctor's ingenious new way...

If You Suffer From A Single One Of These Torturous Symptoms Of Nerves, Tension Or Chronic Anxiety, THEN THE FACTS BELOW MAY BE THE MOST IMPORTANT YOU HAVE EVER READ IN YOUR LIFE!

Because they reveal, for the first time, how your nerves have tricked you into the following mental symptoms:

constant nervousness and over-irritation...indecision...depression ...loss of confidence in yourself and others...feelings of unreality... overwhelming obsession with one or two horrible thoughts...

a hopeless feeling that your entire personality is coming apart...that your identity is dissolving...or that you may be helplessly drifting into a nervous breakdown!

And—equally as bad—how your nerves have tricked you into the following physical symptoms:

chronic fatigue, that starts in the morning, and grows worse as the day goes on...

"missed" heartbeats—"racing" heart—palpitations—or sudden sharp pains under the heart...

sweating hands—or "pins and needles" in either your hands or your legs...

"churning" stomach...nausea...choking feeling in the throat... inability to take a deep breath...tight band of pain around the head..."ready to jump out of your skin"...strange tricks of vision ...weak spells...insomnia, that goes on night after night after night...

hand shaking...panic spasms...knots in your chest...dizziness... difficulty in swallowing...vomiting...and all the other physical tortures that turn your life into one continuous hell!

And Every One Of These Nervous Symptoms Can Be Controlled...And Then Diminished ...And Then Eliminated—OFTEN BY AS LITTLE AS THIS ONE SINGLE INSIGHT INTO THEIR HIDDEN CAUSE!

And that insight is this:

If you suffer from any of the nervous symptoms listed above, then you must understand at once that your nerves are not ill... they have not deteriorated... they have not lost their true physical health in any way! What has happened to them instead is that they have simply become OVER-SENSITIZED..."rubbed raw" by too much outside irritation ...and are now ready to discharge the emotional and physical symptoms of panic at even the slightest thing that goes wrong!

Thus, the depression...indecision...loss of confidence and all the other emotional symptoms you feel are all caused by OVER-SENSITIZED nerves! And the churning stomach...palpitating heart... never-ending headaches and all the other physical nervous-symptoms you feel are—again—all caused by OVER-SENSITIZED nerves!

And therefore the way to treat ALL these symptoms is NOT with drugs...NOT with shock...NOT with medical formulations or hospitalizations at all! The way to treat these nerves is to change the poisonous-thoughts that are rubbing them raw!

And this is done (as proven by this internationally-famed physician on thousands of patients) in four simple steps! The first of which stops nervous symptoms (both physical and emotional) from multiplying from that moment on! The second of which serves to tranquilize and quiet down those over-sensitized nerves far more powerfully (and permanently) than any drug a pharmacist could ever give you!

The third of which lets you stop fighting those symptoms (which only intensifies them in an ever-increasing spiral of sheer torment), and—instead—leave them alone in an ingenious way that lets them start healing themselves!

And the fourth of which—the great reward—brings you slowly-but-surely back to the person you used to be! With a new, enduring feeling of control and confidence that nothing can destroy! So much so that this doctor actually comes right out and states bluntly: "The advice given here will definitely cure you, if you only follow it"!

VITAL NOTE!

To gain the wonder-working benefits of this book in every area of your life starting within the first five minutes after you pick it up—there is absolutely no need to STUDY this revolutionary new book or even read it from cover to cover, or expend any more "literary" effort on your part other than to browse through it at your leisure for one or two thrilling minutes a day!

This is NOT a textbook! NOT a study manual! There are no lectures—not a single "blue-sky" theory to ponder over anywhere!

Instead, for the first time; here are revolutionary new breakthroughs that HELP YOUR NERVES DE-SENSITIZE THEMSELVES...ACTUALLY DRAIN OUT TORTUROUS MENTAL AND PHYSICAL SYMPTOMS, STARTING THE VERY FIRST DAY—all through a few incredibly-simple techniques that you can put to work for you the very first time you pick it up.

Therefore, we do NOT want you to treat this amazing volume as you would an ordinary book! Instead, we ask you this:

Place it on your bedstand, entirely at our risk, for thirty days! Browse through just a few pages every night before you retire! Skip around if you like! But make absolutely no conscious effort to "study" this book, "work" on it, or even memorize a single one of the thrilling techniques you will find on every one of its pages!

Instead, you'll make this startling discovery in these very first thirty days alone. Instantly—simply by leafing through its pages—your mind will automatically absorb the wonder-working procedures laid out for you in this book! Effortlessly, you will respond to its convention-shattering breakthroughs!

Inevitably—hour after hour—day after day—week after week—you will find your body draining away, almost by itself, the tortures of constant nervousness...overwhelming depression...lack of confidence...chronic fatigue..."skipping" or "racing" heart...pins and needles in hands or feet...even nausea, shortness of breath, chest and stomach pains, weak spells, and never-flagging insomnia! And much, much more!

All these—gone! For just a few short moments a day!

WHAT OTHERS SAY:

"...helped me so much and released me from the particular hell I have been living in since my breakdown six years ago."

"I think of Dr. Weekes with admiration and deep gratitude, as I am sure thousands of other people are doing."

"I am amazed at the progress I made in such a short time."

"It would be no exaggeration to add that your book saved my life."

"The method you give for cure of nervous conditions is so effective—and so simple—I cannot think why nothing remotely like your system has been suggested to me."

"The great reassurance you give about the distressing physical symptoms of a disturbed nervous system is one of the greatest benefits to be derived from your book."

"You cannot possibly imagine what a relief it is to be able to view life normally again, instead of fear-panic all the while."

"I cannot describe the emotion I felt to find, at last, someone who really understood the problem, and to hear her say the condition can be cured...."

"I would like you to know that my nervous condition has so greatly improved through the advice gleaned from your most precious and invaluable book...that all symptoms have now disappeared and I rarely need Librium or sleeping capsules."

"My physician is amazed at my progress and of course I showed him your book which he borrowed and read thoroughly and is now recommending to other patients."

"My wife has made a vast improvement since using your book and now feels for the first time like getting away from the hospital altogether. I'm sure if she had had your treatment in earlier years she would never have had to go into the hospital at all."

WHAT THE PUBLISHER SAYS:

HOPE AND HELP FOR YOUR NERVES has already sold over 350,000 copies. Millions of Americans have heard Dr. Weekes on television and radio shows and have read excerpts from the book which appeared in Reader's Digest. If you are one of the many whose nerves are on edge and who sometimes feel panic and don't know why, this remarkable book was written for you.

In Fact, Case History After Case History Proves That Cure May Be So Dramatically Quick That Your Friends And Family Will Beg You To Tell Them Your Secret!

Once again, it doesn't matter what physical or emotional symptoms you are now suffering from...how "deeply entrenched" they are... how long you have been plagued by them...how "old" or "weak" or "out-of-control" you may feel today! Here is specific, step-by-immediate-step advice that will (again to quote directly from the doctor) "banish every unwelcome sensation and regain peace of mind and body"!

For example:

The two-minute self-treatment (you perform one ingenious little action with your chest) that ends sudden panic seizures on the spot—including all their side effects such as dizziness, pins and needles, involuntary stiffening of the joints, inability to breathe, and all the rest.

That "lump in the throat that won't go away"—how to banish it in minutes...and enjoy eating any food you wish to once again!

Physical weakness—perhaps the most dreaded of all symptoms—and (surprisingly) perhaps the fastest of all to banish!

How to deal with the twin monsters of fatigue and guilt! And leave behind emotional exhaustion...morning depression...thoughts that once raced around and around in your mind without cessation! (And leave them all behind—for good!)

Why so many patients who tried these simple techniques actually came out of their nervous sicknesses as far finer and stronger people than they ever were before!

How to recover from chronic tension caused by an insoluable problem! The only sane way to overcome it! How to avoid unnecessary suffering, for both yourself and others! And, perhaps, actually turn your worst defeat into crowning success!

The surest and most permanent way to cure obsessions!

How to tap the forces of Nature, every morning, that are just waiting to cure you!

How to bring happiness back into your everyday life! Not by waiting for some great event or reward...but simply by developing the eyes to see joy in the little things all around you!

And—the final goal: How to develop the kind of nervous control that automatically turns panic off the instant it starts! That frees you forever from "nerve-crutches" such as drugs or alcohol! That lets you pick up your life again from the point where over-sensitized nerves forced you to abandon it, with absolute confidence that you now have the poise and self-possession to accomplish the goals you have always wanted!

Already a best-seller in nine foreign nations, as well as the United States! Read it from cover to cover. We take all the risk! Fair enough? Why not send in the coupon—TODAY!

have been as happy had they been raised in New York," she says, "they are such physical kids, so used to the outdoor living we Greens thrive on. We all play tennis. We all swim. But none of us poses any threat to Billie Jean King or Mark Spitz."

She laughs. Years ago, before attaining financial security, she was frequently forced to travel without her children. Not today. No matter how short the trip, one child goes with her. "That has proven to be a marvelous experience both for us as parents and for the children. Traveling with only one instead of the four has given us a chance to know each other individually, as people, and not as part of a clan. You can't close your ears to a child, or tell him to go out and play when you are in an airplane. You are forced to listen, and as you do, you learn about your child. When we're doing Florida citrus commercials, we do travel as an entire family and that, except for the packing, is delightful."

Her children, although aware their mother is a celebrity and frequently seen on television, don't seem to feel the strain that perpetual limelight imposes on most famous families. Living in Florida has removed that possible trauma. So have the Greens. "Our lives revolve around our home and the church where I teach Sunday school and Bob is a deacon. We have created a nest for our kids that I don't think we could have done in New York or Los Angeles. Yes, Miami has its drug and crime problems but they are not as widespread as in other cities. Here, there is still the chance for an insulated family life."

"It will surprise the many who think of me as one-dimensional to learn my life has not been spent in the warmth of the Florida Sunshine Tree."

She looks at her children, their sun-bleached blond hair haloing their tanned faces, and says softly, "We don't have all the time in the world with those we love. We must always be concerned, day-to-day, with what we give to them. And can we ever give enough?" She pauses and then as though answering: "I wouldn't want my children to follow me into show business. I would want to save them that pain. They, too, are deeply religious and that creates great conflicts when you are a performer. Mine is not always a very Christian-like profession. But, if the Lord says that is to be their way, so be it. But my own dream is that one becomes a minister and one a missionary. Most of all, I want them happy, with themselves and with God."

There are real tears in her eyes and she returns to that fairly recent time when she had to relearn how to be happy with herself and with God. Shortly after she relinquished her Broadway ambitions, she became pregnant. She interpreted that pregnancy as God's sign of the wisdom and joy in her decision to save her marriage and family. But in childbirth, she and the twin babies nearly died. In shock, she needed eight pints of blood to survive the delivery. Upon recovering, she was told the twins probably wouldn't survive, and that if they miraculously did, they would undoubtedly suffer from some kind of brain damage. She lapsed into deep despair.

"There had been other times in my life—like when I was experiencing difficulties in my marriage and in other human relationships—that I felt strongly tempted to sever with God. But something made me hang on. Will my uncertain faith surprise the many who have always thought me so 'sure'? I'm sure it will. If the truth be known, my faith has been far from perfect. There have been times—like when the twins hovered between life and death and I found myself, so deeply anguished, unable to sing—that I felt God had failed me.

"But that truly was not the case," she continues. "Actually, the crises in my life were caused by God. He was trying to get my attention, forcing me to look at my life and at who and what I was. Both the twins and I survived. The doctors called their complete recovery a miracle. They are healthy, beautiful and normal children, and when I see their blond beauty, I see that the rough spots in my life were caused by God to polish me for His use. As a Christian, I believe the purpose of life is to find God's way—and not our own, for His way is so much better than my own. And what a difficult lesson that has been to learn for a stubborn lady like me! But today, I know and understand that being a Christian doesn't mean being removed from life but does mean that in the middle of life's discouragements, heartaches and miseries, the Lord will be there and He will never leave you. Nothing can separate you from His Love and His Love is a constant source of strength."

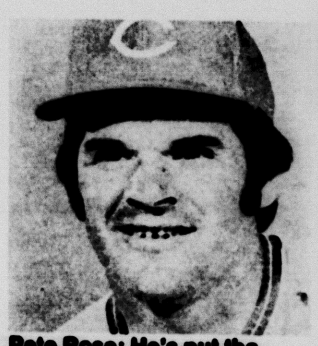
In Time for a New Season:

Eight Great Baseball Players Talk About Their Own Idols

Family Weekly
Sports Extra

By Larry Bortstein



Pete Rose: He's put the "hustle" back into baseball.

"I'm looking forward to facing Catfish Hunter. I respect anyone who commands $3.5 million! He must be doing something right." —Hank Aaron

With the 1975 major-league season slated to get under way on Monday, April 7, FAMILY WEEKLY asked eight major leaguers—seven active players and one (Ralph Kiner) recently elected to the Hall of Fame—to recall the people in baseball they admire the most.

Not surprisingly, Hank Aaron was selected the "most admirable" by two players. Aaron, who begins a new career in the American League this season with the Milwaukee Brewers, after 21 seasons with the Braves in the National League, shattered Babe Ruth's record for lifetime home runs in 1974, when he hammered out 20 to close the season with 733 round trippers. Ruth had 714 in his illustrious career.

As for Aaron himself, the 41-year-old star grouped several players on his list of "admirables."

HANK AARON

The home-run king is returning to Milwaukee, where he played from 1954-65 before the Braves moved to Atlanta. In addition to his 733 career home runs, Aaron has hit for more total bases than anyone in major-league history.

"Who do I admire? Well, myself, for one. I'm proud of the way things have fallen into place for me the past couple of years, breaking Babe Ruth's record and all. Three years ago I didn't know whether I'd ever make it or not, whether I could play long enough. Now that I'm past all that, I'm looking forward to playing a lot of ball in Milwaukee in front of fans who treated me great when I was there for 12 years with the Braves.

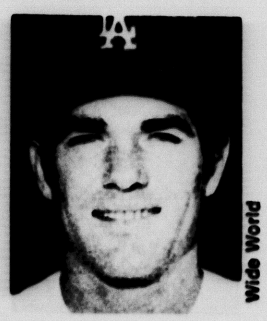
"Three guys I admire are three who I feel have a chance to break my home-run record—Reggie Jackson of Oakland, Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh and Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia. I'll be the first to cheer them on if they ever come close to the record, or if anyone else does. For someone to break the record, he'd have to average between 37-40 homers a year until he's 40 years old, and that makes it very tough.

"One of the things I'm really looking forward to in the American League is facing Catfish Hunter. I respect anyone who commands $3.5 million! He must be doing something right. I want to see how he compares with the great National League pitchers I've faced for the past 21 years. I have a feeling he'll compare pretty well.

"While traveling around the country for Magnavox during the past off-season, I learned of the tragic accidental death of Don Wilson, the Houston Astros' pitcher. He was probably the toughest pitcher I ever faced. He had a fast ball that jammed me, and I never learned to hit him. I hit only one home run off him and that one came when he was just coming off a sore arm. He was a classy pitcher and a classy guy, and it's a shame he died so young, at 29."

STEVE GARVEY

The first baseman of the Los Angeles Dodgers led his team to the National League pennant in 1974 with a .312 average, 200 hits, 21 home runs and 111 runs batted in. He was voted the Most Valuable Player in the league by the nation's sportswriters at the end of the year.



Wide World

"Two guys rank at the top of the list of players I've most admired. One is the late Gil Hodges, and the other is Pete Rose, Cincinnati's great outfield star.

"I got a great chance to know Hodges when I was a boy growing up in Florida. My father drove the bus that took the Dodgers, who were then the Brooklyn Dodgers, to and from exhibition games in Vero Beach, which is still the Dodgers' spring-training camp. As I rode that bus, Gil Hodges became my idol. I was only seven or eight years old then, but every time Gil had a chance he'd play catch with me. He was looked up to by every player on the team because he was always a gentleman—on and off the field. I've tried to be like him as far as my personality is concerned—quiet, but strong and giving.

"As far as Pete Rose is concerned, I admire him for some of the same reasons I admired Hodges. Guys like this create good publicity for baseball. Pete's tremendous energy and hustle on the field are great assets for the game. And he does everything well. He plays cleanly and fairly, and takes the game seriously. You have to admire a guy like that."

RALPH GARR

The Atlanta Braves' left fielder led the National League hitters in 1974 with a .353 average. He also led the majors with 17 triples and finished third in the National League in total bases, an unusually high ranking for a man who doesn't hit many home runs; Ralph hit 11 last season.

"I admire ballplayers who do the same things well that I do: hit the ball to all fields, run and hit for a high average. That's why I like Pete Rose and Joe Morgan of Cincinnati, and also Rod Carew of Minnesota. I think Rose and Morgan are more like me than Carew. Rod places the ball more and doesn't get many extra base hits. He lines singles up the middle and gets on with bunts a lot. But when you hit for the averages he does, you're making good contact an awful lot.

"Rose loves to talk hitting with other good hitters. Whenever we play the Reds I make it a point to talk with him for a few minutes. We discuss how different pitchers around the league are doing and if they're throwing any new pitches. Watching the way Pete hustles keeps me hustling, I'll tell you that.

"Anyone who's been a teammate of Hank Aaron since 1968, as I have, has to admire him a lot too. When I joined the Braves, I was a little shy about going over to talk to Hank, but we became kind of close over the years. You know you're never going to beat him out in anything, but having him there makes you try harder to get close."

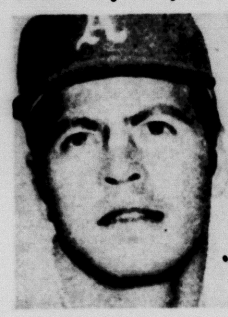
DICK GREEN

Though he batted only .213 for the Oakland A's in 1974, Green won the Babe Ruth Award as the Most Valuable Player in the World Series classic for his brilliant defensive work at second base.

"I'm a .240 lifetime hitter, so I've made my way in the big leagues with defense. The guy I've most admired at second base is Bobby Richardson. For 12 years, from 1955-1966, he was the regular second baseman for the New York Yankees, and one of the best second basemen who ever played.



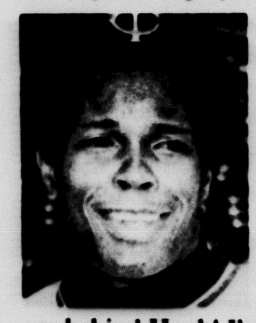
"When I came into the majors with the Kansas City A's in 1963, Bobby was easily the best second baseman in the American League. Nearly every other second baseman in the league tried to pattern himself after Bobby. As a kid I was a Yankee fan, and Bobby was my idol when I was still in the minors trying to work my way up to the majors. When I got to know him, he turned out to be as decent a person as he was a great second baseman.

"Whenever the A's would play the Yankees, I would talk to Bobby, and to Tony Kubek, too, their shortstop. Both of them would go out of their way to point out little things I could do to improve myself. The fact that a player of Bobby's stature helped me like he did makes him really admirable in my book."

ROD CAREW

The left-handed-batting second baseman of the Minnesota Twins has won the last three American League batting championships in a row and four bat titles overall.

"Though there's nothing similar about our styles of play, I look up to Hank Aaron very much, probably more than anyone in baseball. My three home runs last year gave me a lifetime total of 32 for my first eight big-league seasons, and now I'm only 701 homers behind Hank! I'm kidding, obviously. I've never been a home-run hitter and never will be. While I respect Hank for what he's accomplished at the plate, and I'm happy he'll be in the American League this year, I respect him mainly for the way he handled the amazing pressure that was on him last season.



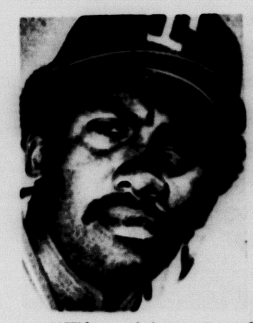
"I pride myself on always giving the fans a fair shake when it comes to signing autographs and making appearances. The fact that Hank could be the same way last year even under unbelievable pressure makes him a guy really worth admiring."

Among the Admired . . .

FERGUSON JENKINS

Between 1967-72, Jenkins won 20 or more games for six straight seasons as a member of the Chicago Cubs.

"The guy I've admired most is Juan Marichal. With the San Francisco Giants, he was the best right-hander in the National League. Until he hurt his back late in his career and ended up with the Boston Red Sox, he was the best right-hander I ever saw.



"The thing I admired most about Marichal was his tremendous stamina. He completed almost every game he pitched. Pitching so many complete games is what I'm most proud of in my career. I started 41 games for the Rangers last year and completed 29, the most in the league. It was the fourth time I led my league in complete games. To me, complete games are the most important pitching statistic. When a pitcher goes nine innings consistently, it means he's almost always keeping his team in contention in a ball game."

JIM "CATFISH" HUNTER

He had a 25-12 won-lost record in 1974, a 2.49 earned-run average and was voted the Cy Young Award as the league's outstanding pitcher.

"My career has probably depended more on two guys than on anybody else. Those are the guys I would have to say I admire most. Continued on page 13

"One is Clyde Kluttz, a former major-league catcher who scouted for the Kansas City A's in the middle 1960's. I was so impressed by him that he was the big reason I signed with the A's when I was just 18. He now scouts for the Yankees, and his conversations with me about coming to New York were very instrumental in my decision to come to the Yankees.

"Then I would have to say I admire Bill Posedel, the A's former pitching coach. He's working for the San Diego Padres now, but from 1968-72 he was the guy who gave me a tremendous amount of help and encouragement. Bill has a great knack for working with pitchers. He never tries to make you change your style, but works with you to develop the style you're comfortable with. Also, with Bill you never have a bad game. If you have to come out of a game, he tells you to chalk it up as just 'one of those days.' "

RALPH KINER

Kiner, who hit 369 home runs during his ten-year major-league career, 1946-55, was the only player elected to the Hall of Fame this year by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"The guy I admire most is Hank Greenberg. Without Hank to guide me when I was a kid, I doubt that I would have made a Hall of Famer of myself.

"I was a rookie with the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1946, right after I came out of military service, and I led the National League in homers that year with 23, the first of seven straight years I led the league [a major-league record]. But I was on a club that wasn't dedicated. There were a lot of guys on that team that didn't take the game very seriously. I myself was pretty happy-go-lucky, content to let my natural ability for hitting a baseball carry me.

"Hank's career was just about over after the 1946 season. He had been a great star for years with the Detroit Tigers, one of the top sluggers of all time. The Pirates signed him for 1947 after the Tigers released him, and the Pirate management shortened the fences in left field at old Forbes Field and called them 'Greenberg Gardens,' figuring Hank still could hit a few out there and bring the fans in.

"Hank was pretty successful and popular that year too. But most of all he showed me what it took to become a great ballplayer. Like a lot of young players who start off well in the majors, I thought the game was easy. I thought I didn't need to work hard.

"But after practice one day, when I was all set to go out and enjoy myself, Hank suggested I stay around and do some extra hitting with him. I did, and from then on, he and I took a lot of extra hitting together. He changed my whole approach. I had been content to stand back at the plate, but Hank got me to move up on top of it. I began to realize that I had to work hard to stay a good, consistent and aggressive hitter.

"That 1947 season I started off slowly. I had only three homers through May, but I hit 48 more the last four months of the season and tied Johnny Mize of the Giants for the league championship with 51. I might have taken a real shot at Babe Ruth's record of 60 with a stronger first two months.

"Hank retired for good after his one season in Pittsburgh, but he stayed long enough to help develop me into a Hall of Famer."

WORDS AND PICTURES

Words and pictures don't begin to show the beauty, brilliance, and fire of these magnificent Gemfire rings. That's why we want you to wear them and judge them on their own merits – not on what we tell you. See if your friends and family can tell them from an expensive "natural" diamond worth 100 times as much. In all probability you can fool them if you want to. Not many people can tell these brilliant Gemfire simulates from the expensive real ones. Yet now you can own these beautiful rings at amazingly low prices.

AN EXCITING GIFT FOR SOMEONE SPECIAL

These Gemfire rings make a much appreciated gift for a special someone in your life. They will last a lifetime. Give for birthdays, anniversaries or just as a wonderful surprise. And even if you choose to tell, your loved one will be amazed and proud that you were clever enough to find such an expensive-looking ring at these remarkably low prices. The difference between it and a natural diamond could make a down payment on a new car, or home, or even a wonderful vacation for just you two!

With Our Guarantee You Take No Risks.

If at the end of 30 days you are not completely satisfied, return by INSURED MAIL for purchase price refund. At any time, or for any reason, and in any condition, you may return your Gemfire simulated diamond by INSURED MAIL for FREE replacement.

LOW PRICE DOESN'T

Mean Low Quality. Gemfire simulated diamonds are not cheap fakes. In fact, Gemfires are carefully cut and polished by skilled craftsmen in the same manner as natural diamonds. They have 58 facets – just like natural diamonds. They are hand set in heavy 18Kt-HGE (heavy gold electroplate), or solid sterling silver by master craftsmen. They shine like a $1,000 diamond – but cost less than $20.00.

EVEN MILLIONAIRES

Wear Simulated Diamonds. Today many wealthy people, TV and movie stars feel unsafe making public appearances wearing expensive jewelry. Oftentimes they keep their diamonds in a safe deposit box and wear these master-crafted Gemfire simulated diamonds and impress your friends!

How to Find Your Ring Size

1. Cut a strip of paper 3 inches long and 1/4 inch wide.

2. Wrap the strip around the finger that is to wear the ring. Then place a dot, on the strip where it meets the end.

3. Place the dot on the strip of paper at "A" on the ring guide. The number at the end of the strip is your ring size.

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

Strange Things "Stress" Does to You

True or False: Stress is something that people should always try to avoid. (See number 1)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Stress is something that people should always try to avoid.

2. If you face a stressful situation—a dreaded ordeal or confrontation with someone who is a threat to you—there is a simple way to reduce the stress and relieve much of the wear and tear on your nerves.

3. One of the best antidotes for stress is leisure.

4. If a father is under stress when his child is conceived, it's likely to be a girl.

5. How much stress a person can take in stride depends to a large extent on his sense of humor.

ANSWERS

1. False. A certain amount of stress is very desirable and serves a useful and valuable purpose. As one university psychologist observes after an extensive study, "Some stress is necessary to bring out the best in us; stress is only a problem when it gets too severe. And it should be remembered that stress can arise when life is too easy as well as when it is too hard." (In fact, the possibility that an easy life—relatively free from stresses and pressures—may shorten the life-span is strongly suggested by a study of over a thousand animals, which showed that those who were subjected to "cares and joys, setbacks and surprises of all kinds" lived longer and were more immune to illness than those who were kept under "ideal conditions.")

2. True. Psychological studies have demonstrated that "the presence of another person in a stressful situation reduces stress, and the presence of a friend reduces stress more than the presence of a stranger." So if there is an ordeal coming up that you're not sure you are capable of facing, take a friend along as a stress-reducer. Or if you can't find a friend, a casual acquaintance will be better than nothing.

3. True. But this doesn't mean idleness, doing nothing or simply "resting." One human-behaviorial specialist defines leisure—the therapeutic variety—succinctly: "Leisure is not the stopping of constructive activity; it is not the time left over after work. Leisure is a state of mind; it is a way of being at peace with oneself and what one is doing. It is doing what one wants to do and what one chooses to do." So if pressure and stresses are getting you down, get some of this special ingredient into your daily activity. It can work wonders—even if you can only spare brief periods of time for it.

4. True—according to studies cited by a team of Washington University scientists. Evidence shows that "the less-stressed parent tends to reproduce its own gender. In other words, if the father is in a less-stressed condition than the mother at the time of conception, there is more chance that the offspring will be a male. Conversely, if the mother is in a less-stressed condition, there is more chance that the offspring will be a female. If both parents are equally non-stressed or equally under stress, and other sex-determinant factors are equal, the male-female offspring ratio will be 50-50." Further studies undertaken by the investigators have provided additional support for this finding.

5. True. Psychiatric studies of men's reactions to extreme stresses and pressures during war have shown that those best able to take stress in their stride tended to share these traits in common: a well-developed sense of humor, an ability to see the funny side of a difficult and threatening situation and an outlook characterized by optimism, self-confidence and faith in their own destinies. On the other hand, men who were lacking in these qualities tended to make the poorest showing under conditions of stress.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

MY HEEL RUNNETH OVER

My shoes both have run-over heels,
Run over not by autos' wheels,
For which I'm glad, but by my feet—
My new-bought shoes quite soon look beat.

My wife says I "toe out" too much,
Resembling Chaplin just a touch.
I say, "Should I walk pigeon-toed?"
And then I do so, down the road.

"Oh, don't be silly," she reproves me,
So I resume, as it behooves me,
My toed-out walk, left foot and right,
The one she married me despite.

After comparing incomes with a friend he hadn't seen in years, a man asked, "How do you manage on so little?" "Oh, I do all right," the friend replied. "But the wife and kids are having a struggle."—Lane Olinghouse

It's very reassuring to talk to people who keep saying, "You know." Because nine times out of ten, I don't.
—Robert Orben

You'll always stay young if you live honestly, eat slowly, sleep sufficiently, work industriously, worship faithfully —and lie about your age.

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES
Kids see life differently. Send contributions to "Child," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10022. $10 if used—none returned.

My nine-year-old niece, when told there would be pink flowers on the bodice of her flower-girl dress, said worriedly to her mother, "Oh, dear, they don't know that I don't have a bodice yet!" —Mrs. Edward Llerewa

One car dealer in my neighborhood called up the Better Business Bureau and asked them to send him some.

DRIVE ON, JEEVES
A homemade special

The car that Bill Ratcliffe built is 18 feet long, has six doors, can do 90 miles an hour, gets 20 miles to the gallon and "is great fun to drive," says Bill, 28. How did he build it? With secondhand materials and a 2.4 Jaguar engine. Car buffs will also be interested to note that this supermobile has nine seats, a stereo, a radio, disk brakes, a sun roof and an intercom to connect the back-seat passengers with the driver. The question is: How does it corner?

How the rich stay rich: " 'Stinginess' is an occupational disease of the millionaire. The man to whom 'two-fifty' means a quarter of a million dollars is likely to be obsessional about $2.50 or even a quarter. . . . The more retentive the Midas is . . . the more likely he is to last out the long run and to bequeath an intact and inviolate fortune. The historian of wealth must be impressed by the similarities between Rockefeller, Getty, Ford and Hughes: secretive, taciturn men whose grip on their businesses was or is only matched by a firm hold on their privy purses." From "The Common Millionaire," by Robert Heller (Delacorte Press, $8.95).

TINY TIM
Absentee father

When Miss Vicki abandoned her husband and took with her their 3½-year-old daughter Tulip, Tiny vowed never to set eyes on the child until she is 15. "If I visited her, it would only be for short, heartbreaking spells. I'd have to explain why I was leaving and when I'd come back. I couldn't take all those partings. The child would get confused, and I think this kind of relationship would be very destructive emotionally to both of us in the long run. I take care of her with $100 a month, and if things get better, I'll increase the amount. I send birthday and Christmas presents, and as soon as she can read, I'll write. But I'll never see Tulip until she's well into her teens."

Of all the young boys who dream at ten years old of starting their own rock band, Bo Donaldson, now 19, is one who succeeded. Here's how it happened: "I was in the fourth grade when the nuns at my Cincinnati school needed entertainment for a PTA meeting. I put together a six-piece group, and after that we stuck together. When I was 12, we went on the road with Paul Revere and The Raiders. Every night after a concert we'd go to bed early, get up real early in the morning and fly back to Cincinnati, where Mom picked us up at the airport and drove us to school. As soon as school was over, she'd take us back to the airport so we could fly out for our concert that night." Seven years later Bo and The Heywoods hit the "Top Ten" with "Billy, Don't Be a Hero"!
